SHOTGUN NEWS TREASURY Vol. 15

It's that time of the year again; time to pick up your copy of the SGN Treasury. Here in one volume, you'll find the best writing from the 2014 editions of SGN.

Peter Kokalis treats you to a magisterial three-part study of the Luger; a gun that has been covered more than most any other but still unveils secrets. David Fortier reveals what's hot and what's not in the AR world.

The SHOTGUN NEWS Treasury covers everything from antiques to machine guns in the style SGN readers enjoy. It's 256 perfect-bound pages, with many features in full color!

SHOTGUN NEWS TREASURY

On sale at fine retailers like Barnes & Noble and Wal-Mart.

"Our visits with our sellers are always pleasant, I look forward to every flight."

Missouri's Flying Gun Runner

The gun runners of old used sailing ships or steam locomotives to move their wares. Today, there is a Class 3 dealer in Missouri who uses something a lot faster. If you are selling a machine gun collection, Midwest Tactical Inc., will come to you: by air. Frank Goepfert, MWT founder and president, owns and operates a Cirrus SR22 airplane. Since two other company employees are also pilots, MWT can cover the map to meet with customers and close deals on machine gun collections.

Nothing else in the gun business is as regulated as Title II arms like machine guns, suppressors and short-barreled guns. A machine gun dealer must know federal and state regulations inside and out, along with knowing current market values and the players in the trade. MWT is staffed with NFA specialists who deal with trusts, estates, National Firearms Act (NFA) transfers and Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms (ATF) regulations.

Buyers for machine guns tend to be widely scattered, as do sellers. By its very nature, the NFA business is a national business. Having the ability to go meet the customers and see the merchandise is a huge plus. There are only about 186,000 transferable machine guns on the NFA registry, and there are at most only a few hundred transferable machine guns for sale at any time. As a result, prices of NFA arms have risen to levels once thought impossible. Sellers, especially heirs of war veterans, may have no idea the value of their guns.

Frank originally pursued his private pilot license as a hobby, but the ability to cover ground in a fraction of the time needed to drive soon started to pay dividends for the business. "Meeting customers face to face is always a pleasure," Frank says. "Gun people tend to be nice people with whom we share common interests, including flying. Our visits with our sellers are always pleasant, I look forward to every flight."

MWT is licensed to deal in machine guns and standard Title I firearms such as pistols, rifles and shotguns. In Addition, MWT holds a Type 07 license with SOT in Missouri. While machine guns are the focus of the business, if you also have Title I firearms to sell, MWT can purchase the entire collection.

MWT does the paperwork and arranges shipment of the guns after ATF approves the transfer. ATF can take months to approve a transfer, even to a dealer. MWT still pays up front. Most customers only have one or two machine guns to sell, and small purchases still make up the bulk of the business. Those buys of fewer than five machine guns can usually be made using pictures and forms, without the need for a visit.

A growing number of purchases are collections and Federal Firearms License (FFL) closeouts that often benefit from a visit to the customer, especially those sellers who are not familiar with machine guns or NFA procedures. MWT will travel to meet the customers and offer an honest assessment. On more than one occasion, the customers were heirs of estates that involved an FFL business.

There are a lot of hoops to jump through with ATF on FFL liquidations, and the specialists on the MWT payroll can handle them smoothly, dealing with local ATF field offices and the NFA branch. If you are not looking to sell an entire collection, MWT can broker your guns. The fee is 10%, and MWT does all the paperwork, making life a lot simpler for the seller.

The NFA business is unlike any other retail model. The inventory is scarce and cannot be ordered up from a local big box store. MWT can only get inventory from customers who are willing to sell, so they make selling easy.

Frank Goepfert welcomes your call if you are thinking of selling, or want a verbal appraisal on the current market value for your machine guns. Discussions about planning for future estate or business liquidations are also welcome. NFA transfers are serious business which require knowledge and expertise. The MWT team will make selling your machine guns both enjoyable and lucrative.

- MWT is staffed with NFA specialists who deal with trusts, estates, NFA transfers and BATF regulations
- MWT is licensed to deal in machine guns and standard Title I firearms.
- MWT offers more for your guns than anyone else in our industry.
- MWT does all the paperwork

THE KNOX UPDATE

From The Firearms Coalition

By Jeff Knox

THE MAINE EVENT

(September 10, 2015) Mike Bloomberg's minions—and his money—flooded into the state of Maine at the end of the summer, launching a massive assault on the rights of Maine gun owners. Bloomberg, through his subsidiary groups, Everytown, and Demandin Moms, has launched a petition drive to get a background check and registration initiative on the ballot for the 2016 elections. The groups are hiring teams of professionals to collect the 61,123 signatures needed to get the measure on the ballot, and have vowed to do "whatever it takes" to accomplish their goals. And to Bloomberg, "whatever it takes" literally means whatever, including lying, exploiting tragedies, and selling out his other "principles" in order to get his way. So far he's spent over $100 million in misleading advertising, distorted "research," campaign contributions, and professional lobbyists at the state and federal level. If he succeeds with the petitions, the next step will be millions more spent to convince low-information voters in Maine to throw away their rights—and everyone else's—and then move on to the next state to repeat the process.

Bloomberg and his billionaire pals ponied up over $10 million dollars last year to make it a criminal act to even loan a gun to a friend without first paying a fee and getting a government permission slip in Washington State. They then gathered enough signatures to put their restrictive bill on the 2016 ballot in Nevada, and managed to push their bill through the Oregon legislature. In Nevada, Bloomberg paid signature gatherers as much as $5 per signature to get the numbers they needed, and many of those same Bloomberg-paid signature gatherers were also collecting signatures on petitions to get a marijuana legalization initiative on the ballot—a measure that Bloomberg has vocally opposed and called "stupid."

The Bloomies came to Arizona earlier this year, but after establishing a presence in the state and laying some groundwork, they appear to have backed off for the moment. It looks like they decided the political climate and initiative laws in Maine are more favorable. Arizona has well-organized, solidly established grassroots groups that have already geared up to take him on, and unlike many states, activists in Arizona generally work well together and cooperate rather than competing.

On the other side of the country, Maine is in a very different situation. While the state has historically enjoyed both minimal gun control laws and very low crime rates, it's close to bastions of gun control like New York and Massachusetts, and has seen major shifts in its political base as young natives leave to find jobs in other states while well-heeled refugees from heavily restrictive states have migrated to the fresh air and freedom of The Pine Tree State. There has also been a major influx of immigrants from Somalia and Central Africa, bringing with them different cultural values and widespread perceptions of increased crime and violence. Of course, like migrants everywhere, many of the new residents are determined to establish the same sort of laws and restrictions that they are familiar with from their home regions.

Perhaps most importantly, Maine, like Nevada, has never had a strong network of Second Amendment advocates. They haven't really needed them. The organizations that do exist in the state are either old-line hook-and-bullet "sportsmen" groups with little taste or skill for the political arena, or newer groups just getting established. Gun Owners of Maine has made some impressive progress in the legislative arena—this year successfully passing a "Constitutional Carry" law—but they are a young organization with limited resources, relatively small membership, and little experience with public relations or political campaigns.

The Firearms Coalition has been active in anti-Bloomberg strategy and coalition building in Nevada and Arizona, and is helping groups in Maine as well, but these battles must be fought and won by the local folks. That means that groups like GO Maine must rise to the challenge and lead the charge.

Facing Bloomberg's billions and his skilled team of professional PR flaks is a daunting challenge, but it must be done, and it must start now. Lovers of freedom need to be ready to reveal Bloomberg's carpetbagging deceivers for what they are. Mainers cannot count on an outside organization like the NRA to ride in and save the day. They have to step up, get involved, and defend their rights. GO Maine is a good place to start. The group is already coordinating with other organizations around the state, and across the country, to meet the Bloomberg threat head-on. Readers interested in helping with this fight should visit GunOwnersofMaine.org and provide whatever support you can.

Win or lose, Bloomberg and his ilk are not going to give up with Maine; they are going to keep pushing their repressive agenda at every opportunity and in every state. But if we can beat them back in Maine, we have a better chance of stopping them when they try to push their restrictive policies in your state. Don't wait for someone else to do it. Stand up now.

FROM THE EDITOR:

I'LL NEVER WORK AGAIN

Do you have ink on your fingers? If not, you probably haven't read this whole issue yet.

As the new editor, I want to show that I have a very healthy respect for where Shotgun News came from. I understand the fabric of what made it popular in the first place. I've subscribed to it and even bought stuff from it. I still have a Mosin-Nagant M91/30 and M44 in my closet along with cases of 7.62x54R that I bought from these pages while I was in college. Throughout that time, Shotgun News' advertisers are what kept me shooting. I understand that the shopping aspect has made Shotgun News popular. How many times have you scanned the ads and found something you never knew you needed, like an oiler or sling for your M1 Carbine, or surplus German Flecktarn ponchos? I certainly didn't know I needed them, but I still have them. I used to love the fact that when I finished thumbing through the pages of Shotgun News I always ended up with ink on my fingers. But it wasn't just the cheap corrosive ammo or surplus goods that kept me renewing my subscription; I learned an awful lot from the stories, and they influenced my hobbies.

In years past, I always worked to pay for my hunting and shooting habits. I enjoy deer, turkey and alligator hunting (I'm from Florida). As far as shooting goes, I like silhouette, run-and-gun competitions, as well as trap and sporting clays. Shooting and hunting is where my true passion lies. I've almost exclusively hunted public land because I could never afford a lease. My free time was spent checking trail cameras or scouting, and when I was indoors I was handloading. I still reload on the single-stage RCBS Rock Chucker I bought years ago. In my free time I was doing what I love, but my professional life left a lot to be desired. You might say I was burnt out at work.

I decided I'd try to live the adage, “love what you do and you'll never work a day in your life.” So I set my sights on what I'd always wanted: to be the editor of a gun magazine. I love magazines and I love guns. Editing a gun magazine would be the ideal career, right?

After a brief job hunt, I got a call from Shotgun News Publisher/Editor Bob Hunnicutt the very same day I submitted my resume. At first I was shocked that I was being considered for editorship of this title, but then elation set in as I realized that I was about to fulfill a dream I'd had for years: to be a part of the shooting and hunting industry in a big way.

Sometimes it's still surreal to see my name atop the masthead each month, and being editor of this magazine is something I relish and take very seriously. I look forward to continuing to bring you compelling and relevant content that Shotgun News has delivered for more than 70 years.

And that saying is true, by the way: I've been on the job for three months now and have yet to work a lick.

Best,

Dan Saez

Reloading—whether by the tens or thousands—will save you time and money. Here's an insider's advice.

By James Tarr

I remember walking around a local gun show maybe twenty years ago, and one of the vendors had cases of .223 PMC ammunition on sale—1,000 rounds for $175. I didn't buy any...because of how expensive it was. What's that saying about hindsight?

Even though ammo prices are currently freefalling (after the high experienced in the post-Sandy Hook Great Panic), due to the price of metals, ammunition is much more expensive than it ever has been, and that is not likely to change.

What was true twenty years ago is still true today—loading (or reloading) your ammunition is still cheaper than buying new.

First, some math. Reloaded ammo traditionally costs 60% of what new ammo does, and the higher ammo prices go, the more money reloading saves you. The more you shoot, the more money you save. What I'm going to be talking about in this article is high volume handloading. What constitutes high volume? If you shoot a thousand rounds a year, which is less than a hundred rounds a month, even if you bought an expensive press you'd break even in just a few years.

They say there are two types of reloaders, those who reload so they can shoot more, and those who shoot so they can reload more. At different times in my life I have been a member of both camps. My first "precision" bolt-action rifle was a Steyr SSG that would do .75 MOA if I fed it the right stuff. Toward that end I bought benchrest powder measures, digital scales, every tool and bit of tech that would enable me to wring the utmost in accuracy out of each round. I personally have spent hours reloading just a handful of .308s, sorting cases by headstamp and weight, deburring primer pocket holes, turning necks for concentricity, and weighing every single powder charge in the enjoyable but ever-frustrating goal of sending numerous bullets through the same hole at ridiculous distances. Cost and time spent were non-factors.

Then I discovered competitive action pistol shooting. IDPA, 3-Gun, IPSC, and Steel Challenge-type matches, even local ones, can require hundreds of rounds to complete. Add that up over a year, plus practice sessions, and you're talking thousands of rounds. Sometimes tens of thousands. When I was at the top of my game in USPSA competition, 95% of my practice was dry-firing, and still I went through 6,000–7,000 rounds per year.

Even if you're not interested in competition but just regular plinking at the local range, it is easy to burn through a truckload of ammo before you know it. I take my two boys shooting and they can burn through hundreds of rounds of ammo with ease. Think about how often you go to the range, and how much ammo you fire each time, and do the math to figure out what that equals for the year—I bet you just realized you're going through more ammo than you thought. And still you'd like to shoot more, right?

Which Press is Best?

To afford high-volume shooting without cancelling your kids' health insurance will require some sacrifice. Or you could just start handloading your ammo. High volume handloading, however, doesn't mean low quality. The ammo produced by modern presses, either single-stage or progressive, is usually more inherently accurate than the shooters using it.

The first thing required for high-volume handloading is a progressive press. Single-stage presses are great for Anyone who has ever gone shooting with their kids knows that is a quick way to burn through hundreds of rounds very quickly.

Competitive shooters, almost as a rule, handload. For some people the only way they can afford to compete is by handloading their ammo, in bulk.

learning how to handload or for putting together small batches of ammo. I use one all the time for that, such as assembling short runs of oddball ammo for articles. However, as useful as single-stage presses are, if you try to use one to generate mass quantities of ammo you will need a doctor's prescription to handle your depression or screaming fits. Or both. With a progressive press, you will easily be able to generate loaded ammo three to ten times as fast as with a single-stage press.

Also, let me make a quick point—while most of the high-volume reloading I've done has been of handgun cartridges, modern progressive presses are perfectly capable of producing rifle cartridges that are more than accurate enough for plinking, practice, or local matches. All the progressive presses that I can think of are capable of handling rifle cartridges up to the .30-06 in length, if not beyond. Rifle brass takes more prep work, of course, including lubing the cases, but modern progressive presses are what you want to use if you plan to load more than fifty rounds or rifle ammo at a time.

What's a progressive press? Progressive presses have multiple stations for dies, and with every pull of the lever a loaded cartridge is produced. Think of them as assembly lines for making ammo.

Many companies make excellent progressive presses, and the designs are improving all the time. Dillon, RCBS, and Hornady all make excellent progressive presses. With proper care they will run for years, if not decades. At the time when I bought my first progressive press I wanted one with an automatic case feeder. There were two in my price range—the Lee Loadmaster (www.leeprecision.com) and the Dillon XL650 (www.dillonprecision.com).

Seeing as the Lee was half the cost of the Dillon I bought it, and it served me well for over fifteen years before I replaced it. Both the Lee Load-Master and the Dillon XL650 are still in production, and the Lee is still less than half the cost of the Dillon.

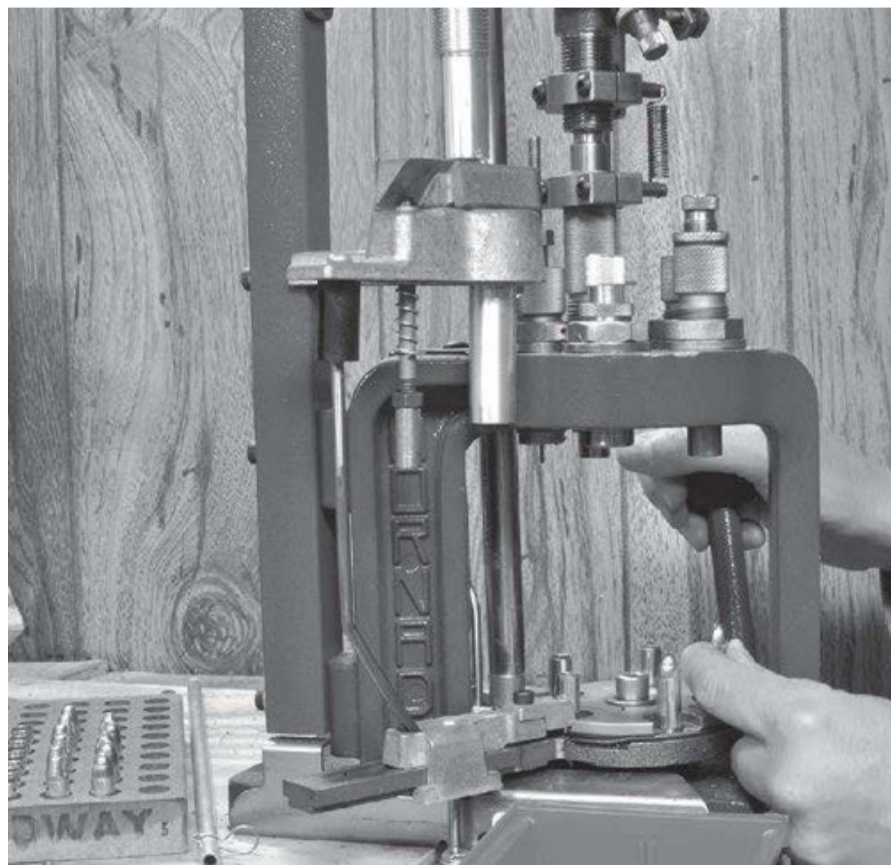

Also, keep your press clean and properly lubed. It is a machine just like a car, and if all the moving parts are covered with dust and spilled powder and brass shavings its life span will be drastically shortened. If I'd properly maintained my Lee it would probably still be working.

For the last five years I've been using a Hornady Lock-N-Load (www.hornady.com) and have been very happy with it. Do I recommend one brand over another? No. Dillon owns the competitive shooting market, and among the USPSA crowd 80-90% of those who handload use Dillon presses, but to me they don't seem mechanically

A progressive press, such as this Hornady Lock 'N Load, with an automatic case feeder, is necessary to produce a high volume of cartridges. Leave single stage presses for benchrest or hunting rifle ammo. A clutter-free workbench will keep you organized.

If you have an automatic case feeder, all you have to do to load a round is seat a bullet and work the lever.

superior to any other design. Dillon has always marketed their stuff toward competition shooters and has a great warranty and legendary customer service, and it is these factors that have contributed to their success as much as the quality of their products.

Lee progressive presses are looked down upon by a number of competitive shooters, perhaps because they are less expensive, but I personally know a lot of other shooters (besides me) who bought the Lee because of its price point and they're very happy with it. There are also those who started out on a Lee because they couldn't afford anything else and are quite satisfied. There are features of the Lee presses that I prefer to any competing design, such as the ease of loading the primer tray. Instead of replacing my press, I could have sent it in to Lee and for half the cost of a new press they will recondition it to like new condition.

Investing in a progressive press and at least one set of dies, plus the various accessories you'll need if you don't already have them (such as a powder scale) will cost $500, and you can spend a lot more than that. For those of you who don't have a progressive press and are wondering if the investment is worth the payoff, remember that reloaded ammo traditionally costs 60% of what new ammo does. If you shoot 2,000 rounds of pistol ammo a year, the press will pay for itself in two years. The more you shoot, the sooner your investment will pay off, and even my "cheap" Lee Load-Master lasted through more than fifteen years of abuse.

Not all progressive presses are the same. Some can be had with automatic case feeders, which drastically speed up reloading. Now you can even find automatic bullet feeders. But, don't believe everything you read from the manufacturers about the speed of their press. However many rounds the manufacturer says you can load per hour, you should cut that in half to get a more realistic number. There's always a primer going in sideways or a crushed case slowing you down.

Operation of a progressive press is such: The dies that screw into the top of the press handle all the work; all the operator does is move the handle back and forth to feed the cases into them, with the shellplate rotating with/after each pull of the lever. The shellplate rotates cases around to different stations.

The first station features a decapper, which punches out the old primer. Most decappers have expanding shafts, which nudge out-of-spec case necks back into shape.

The second station is where a fresh primer gets pressed into the case. The third station is where the newly primed case gets filled with the designated amount of powder. Unless you've got an automatic bullet feeder, the operator then sets a virgin bullet into the top of the case, and with another stroke of the lever seats and crimps the bullet into place.

That was only four stations, and most presses have five—the fifth can be used for a second crimping after the

A press is a machine like any other—the cleaner you keep it, the longer it will last. Seen here is Tarr's Lee Load-Master shortly before it died an ugly death.

No matter what production rate the manufacturer says you can attain with your press, you should halve that to get a more realistic number. Things are always going to slow you down, such as seen here—cases getting crushed, or bullets or primers not seating properly.

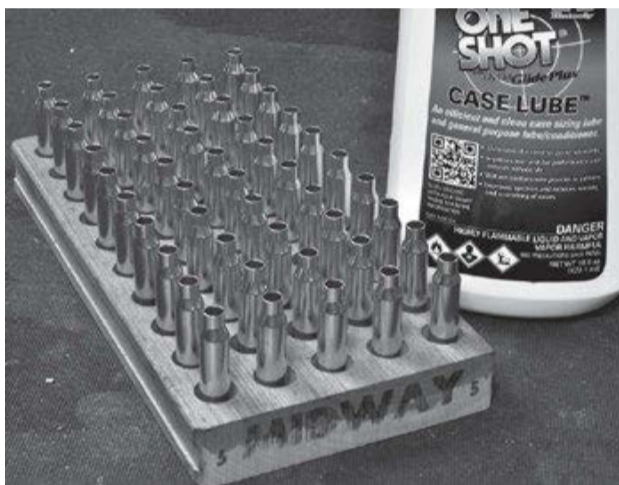

Using new brass has its own issues. Having never been loaded before, new brass tends to give off brass shavings as seen here during the loading process.

You don't need reloading-specific polish for your brass, go down to the local hardware store and buy a commercial metal polish such as Brasso.

Even if you only plan on loading 50 rounds you should think about buying in bulk. Five-hundred-round packs (or greater) are always cheaper per bullet, and you know you'll eventually use them.

Using a loading block like this will ensure uniform application of lube to bulk load rifle brass, but some people just douse a loose pile of brass.

Sonic cleaners, such as this Hornady on the left, are the new in thing. They tend to cost more, but get cases cleaner quicker. Vibratory case cleaners are simple and work.

bullet has been seated, or for expanding the case a little more prior to hand-seating the bullet, or not at all—user's choice.

When I was loading rifle ammo for bolt guns I meticulously sorted the ammo by headstamp and inspected each case individually. When I started handloading for my .45 ACP 1911 I did the same thing. It took me some time to realize that sorting headstamps for pistol ammo is a complete waste of time.

Competition shooters hot-loading their .38 Super ammo with compressed loads and small rifle primers to make their declared power factor carefully keep track of how many times their brass has been loaded, as the high pressures drastically shorten case life. Low-pressure cartridges, on the other hand, can be reloaded nearly forever. I've seen .45 ACP cases that had been shot so many times the headstamps were unreadable. As long as the case still holds bullet, powder, and primer, it's generally still safe to reload. You should still inspect your brass for defects, but when it comes to bulk loading, headstamp doesn't matter, not even when loading .223 and .308.

Your dies size the outside of the case so it will fit into the chamber of your pistol. How closely you examine your brass should depend in large part on where you obtained it. If you've got new brass or once-fired brass that came out of your gun you'll barely need to spare it a glance. If you're digging months-old brass out of half-frozen mud on a public range, chances are you should examine what you find very carefully. One Berdan-primed case will make everything grind to a halt, and maybe blow a primer. If you're reloading and don't know what a Berdan-primed case is, look it up right now. Especially if you're thinking of reloading that military surplus/weird/cheap European ammo you got at a great price.

Speaking of blowing up primers while reloading, while I've never personally done it I've see it done, and had a friend do it on my press. While trying to seat the primer into the case something gets misaligned, and instead of just getting quietly crushed the primer goes 'bang'. It sounds about as loud as a .22 rifle outdoors—you won't miss it when it happens.

Always wear eye protection when reloading! Blowing up a primer while reloading isn't an if proposition, but rather a when, and you don't want unprotected eyes when that happens. Listen to your press while loading. If something sounds or feels wrong, stop. Don't force it. That's how you blow primers or break things. Back the handle off, figure out what the problem is, and get back to work. It's quicker than having to order a replacement part.

When you are loading rounds by the thousands, bulk packs are your friend. Buying in volume is always cheaper, so don't think about how much of (X) you need for your next loading session, but how much you'll need for the next six months or a year. For my competition pistol needs I load 147-grain 9mm bullets, and I bought a bulk pack of 2,500 from Hornady. The price per bullet is much cheaper.

Buying bullets in bulk is the way to go, but what kind of projectile you buy will depend on your needs, and your budget. Lead bullets are, of course, the cheapest, but also the dirtiest. And you can't fire them through any pistol with polygonal rifling (Glocks, HKs, etc.). Plated bullets such as those sold by Berry's split the difference in cost between plain lead and jacketed projectiles, but some guns don't like them. Most major ammunition makers sell their components separately. I recommend perusing the Brownells and Midway USA websites, and recent SHOTGUN NEWS issues to find the best deals.

Bullets aren't the only component where you can save money in bulk. Buy a 4- or 8-pound keg of powder instead of one pound, if you think you'll use it up in a few years. I've got powder in my basement that's fifteen years old. If stored properly, it doesn't go bad. If you buy it locally you don't have to pay shipping or HAZMAT fees. That's another cost to consider—you'll pay flat HAZMAT fees no matter how much you buy online, so you'll pay less per pound buying that 8-pound keg of powder anyway.

The charge weight to me was not a concern when I was precision loading rifle ammo. When I switched to volume handloading of pistol ammo, however, both the charge weight necessary to get the performance I wanted as well as price and availability suddenly mattered.

For years my 9mm competition pistol load used Vihtavuori N320 powder, as it was much softer than any other powder on the market, and I could use less of it (a mere 3.3 grains behind a 147-grain bullet gave me the velocity I needed). With that low charge weight I can load roughly 2,000 rounds with one pound of powder! Some time ago I switched to Hodgdon Titegroup, which while providing the same soft recoil and velocities with the same 3.3-grain charge weight is both cheaper and more commonly available. Try finding any kind of Vihtavuori at your local gun store.

When loading precision rifle ammo I weighed every single powder charge. That is not necessary with a properly set up progressive press. You should expect a variation of +/- .1 grain, although that could change depending on the type of powder you're using and how easily it meters. You should weigh random powder charges throughout the reloading period just to make sure nothing has moved out of alignment. I recommend checking one in every 100 rounds on a new press, and one in every 500 rounds or so on a proven one.

When it comes to weighing powder charges, while the traditional balance beam-type scales work just fine, they're slow, and this is all about speeding up the process. Get an electronic scale. They're not expensive, and they'll last for years. I purchased my RCBS electronic scale in 1993 and it still works great.

Safety precautions and quality control procedures like this are just some of the reasons why you won't be producing ammo at the advertised rate of your press. Still, your production rate will still be much faster than with a single-stage press. When everything is humming along smoothly and I don't even have my primer tubes pre-filled, I can easily load 350–400 rounds per hour on my press. Even when I'm having issues (bad cases, reluctant primers, etc.) I can do 200 rounds an hour. Compare that to the +/-50 rounds per hour on a single stage.

The longer you load the more tools and equipment you'll amass. Make sure you keep everything organized for your own sanity and safety.

If you want to go extreme there is the Ponsness/Warren Auto-Drive, which I've most commonly seen attached to Dillon presses. Hook this little motor up to your press, hit the ON button, and it'll be all you can do to keep your press fed with bullets, cases, and primers as it chugs out 800–1,200 rounds per hour, depending on the speed setting. Of course, I wouldn't exactly consider that handloading.

Get Primed

When handloading you will eventually have to do some figuring—how much time do you want to spend handloading, and how much money are you willing to spend? I say that because automatic case and bullet feeders are available for a number of different presses, and they will save you a huge amount of time but they aren't cheap. Personally I would recommend, at a minimum, an automatic case feeder. That way all you have to do to keep your press working is to place a bullet in the mouth of the prepped case and work the handle.

Primer capacity is the limiting factor on presses. There isn't a press on the market that has the capacity to hold more than 100 primers, which means at least every 100 pulls of the handle you'll have to stop to refill your primer supply. This is why I really like the Lee Load-Master, as it uses a primer tray. Simply remove the empty primer tray, place it over a fresh sleeve of primers, and flip over the sleeve to dump 100 primers into the tray. You'll need to shake it once or twice to make sure the primers are all facing the right way, but then you're done. It usually takes less than a minute. Compare that to filling the primer tubes used by Dillon and Hornady presses, which can take five minutes—and in that five minutes how many times could you work the handle of your press?

Years ago there was a bit of a kerfuffle between Lee and Dillon (or at least their fans) in regards to which type of primer feeding was safer. The argument against the Lee primer tray was that if you had a sympathetic detonation, the entire tray would go off like a claymore mine. The only problem was that nobody had ever heard of that happening. If there is a detonation of a primer in a primer tube (a la Dillon and Hornady), the entire tube would go off and explode upward. This was deemed safer, because the primer tubes are metal and pointed in a safe direction. As opposed to the Lee whole-primer-tray-exploding scenario, which I haven't heard of actually happening, I do know of a few people who have scorch marks on their ceilings above their Dillon primer tubes from when the wholotube of primers ignites. While admittedly such an occurrence is rare (I know lots of people who load tens of thousands of rounds a year), it is just another reason to always wear eye protection.

To speed up the process, Dillon has sold a primer tube filler, which is a bench-mounted motorized device. Simply dump your primers in the top, stick a primer tube in the bottom, and in just a few seconds the machine will fill up your primer tube, all the primers facing the correct way. It's simple, quick, and easy, but the primer tube filler sells for $317, and if you want to switch from large primers to small (or vice versa) the conversion kit costs an additional $50.

Hornady has recently introduced their Lock-N-Load 1911 Primer Tube Filler, which is a unique take on solving the problem. This is a handheld vibrating primer tube filler in the shape of a 1911, powered by two AAA batteries. It comes with two tubes each for large and small primers, and will work with Dillon primer tubes as well. I've had one for a few weeks and while it is not as quick or easy to use as the Dillon model, it works and will save you time and effort. It also retails for a much more affordable $72.08.

Clean Up Your Act

The cleaner you can get your cases the more your press will like you. Feed your press cases that are as clean as you can make them. Not only will it help your press run cleaner longer, a proper cleaning will sometimes reveal splits or other damage that wasn't visible before.

There are two types of case cleaners, sonic and vibratory. A vibratory cleaner requires some sort of tumbling media such as corn cob grit or crushed walnut shells. Fresh, clean media works much better than stuff so black it looks like coal, but even dirty media will get your cases somewhat clean. As I'm cheap, I hate to replace my media until I absolutely have to. A good tip is to go to your local pet store and search for lizard litter, which is simply crushed walnut shells, only cheaper than the stuff sold specifically as tumbling media.

Many companies make reloading-specific polish to use in your tumbler. Not only is it a little more expensive, you can't find it locally, which means you'll have to order it online. Instead, just go to your local hardware store and buy some metal polish. When I found myself out recently I took a trip down to my local Lowe's and bought a bottle of Brasso. I wasn't buying it specifically to polish the cases in my tumbler (the media does that), I was buying it because I needed something to cut the dust. The media in my tumbler is old and falling apart, and instead of replacing it, the Brasso will keep the dust down and extend the life of the media. Did I mention I was cheap?

Bullets aren't the only things to buy in bulk. You'll pay flat HAZMAT charges on all shipments of primers and powder, so why not go big?

Vibratory cleaners last forever. I'm still using the first one I bought in 1993 from Midway USA. Before you buy one you have to determine how big you want it, and for that you need to think about what kind of cases you're going to feed it. My small tumbler can fit close to 400 9mm cases, but only about 150 .223 cases.

Sonic cleaners are the new in thing, and use solution as opposed to media. They tend to cost more, and hold fewer cases, but work faster and often get cases cleaner. Dump the cases into the sonic cleaner along with some water and detergent cleaner and in just a few minutes they come out looking like new. The only problem is they come out wet, and I've never found an easy or quick way to dry off my cases. And they need to be completely dry; a drop of water in your primer pocket could kill your primer and render the round useless.

"Just throw them onto a towel on your deck and the sun will get them dry in just a few hours," I was told once.

My less-than-polite response? "What if it's January? I live in Michigan, genius. They'll freeze into a solid block of ice."

I was also told to put them in a bag and throw them in my clothes dryer. Forget the noise and the dented cases; can you picture the look on your significant other's face when she learns you put gun stuff in her dryer? My solution has been simply to let them air dry for days—simple, but not quick.

Hornady has just introduced this automatic vibrating primer tube filler that also works with Dillon primer tubes, and is much quicker than doing it by hand.

Hornady may have just solved the sonic cleaner dilemma. Recently introduced at a media event and probably available the first part of 2016, the Hornady Case Dryer is a stackable multi-level unit that circulates warm air to dry the cases in just a few hours. If you've ever used a dehydrator to make jerky or dried fruit the concept is the same.

While loading or reloading your own ammo is satisfying and can save you money, it does take time and effort. But, if you like working with your hands and/or are looking for some quiet alone time, heading to the basement/garage to load some ammo may be just the thing you need to relax. Bring a radio so you can listen to music/talk radio...but please don't be like a shooter I know and load ammo while sipping your rum and Coke. Alcohol and guns don't mix, and loading ammo while drinking seems to me to be an equally unpleasant recipe for disaster. And have a fire extinguisher nearby, because excrement happens.

Finally, allow me to let you in on a little secret—handloading your own ammo ultimately may not save you much money. Why? Because if you're loading in bulk, you love to shoot. Handloading will just allow you to shoot more without spending any more money. Which sounds great to me. ©

RAPTAR LITE

A ONE-STOP SHOP FOR LIGHTS AND LASERS

By Patrick Sweeney

The Raptar Lite, as it would be ready to go onto your rifle.

Ever build up an AR, and once you've added all the "must have" items, wound up with a boat anchor? A friend of mine (and I love him like a brother) has an AR that is set up for every contingency. It has to weigh ten pounds or more, but I've never had the heart to put it on a scale when he wasn't looking. Me, I figure a rifle that weighs that much had better be chambered in something .30.

So, why can't we have a lot of the gear we want, in one lightweight box? Moore's Law predicted that the number of transistors on a chip would double every two years. He started this back in 1965, and it has held up so far. What this means is that today your smartphone contains more computing power than NASA had at its disposal before we stopped going to the moon. (And why did we stop, now that I've broached the subject?)

So why do all my desired gizmos for my AR come as individual items, each of which needs its own clamp or bracket to hold it on? Yes, we can get combo light and laser units, but they are generally pistol lights, adapted for rifle use. For rifles, we need separate red lasers, IR lasers, white lights, and each has its own battery, mount, and need for rail space.

Enter the Wilcox Raptar series. The Raptar S, Raptar, and Raptar Lite are all combined digital tools. They range in price and performance. The base model is the Raptar Lite, then up to the Raptar and then the Raptar S.

At the top of the heap is the S model, which contains two lasers, IR and visible, an IR laser flood, and a laser range finder. As part of the S package, there is included ballistic solutions software. So, not only does your Raptar S laser the range, it displays the drop/holdover solution for you.

The Raptar omits the ballistics solution software, but still does all that the S does. And the Lite? Well, it has un-accelerated lasers in IR and visible, lasers that are eye-safe so those of us who are not institutional purchasers can acquire them. It also has the IR flood, but no range-finder, so then Wilcox made up for the less-powerful lasers and added a visible light module, good for 80 lumens, built right in.

So, to make it clear; what you get with the Raptar Lite is a box with an IR laser, an IR flood, visible laser, and an 80 lumen visible light, in a package that bolts onto the rail of your rifle. The Raptar Lite also comes with instructional CD, printed instructions, an M-1913 rail adapter, and a laser target so you can bore-sight your laser before you go to the range and fine-tune it.

The left back corner holds the selector knob and the plug to install the remote switch.

The display tells you what setting you are on, and can be adjusted for brightness.

The remote switch and the Raptar box both contain the switches needed to work with the system.

The existing laser modules in use are a "black box" item. If something goes wrong, and swapping in a fresh battery doesn't solve the problem, you basically have to buy a new one. This is not a problem for the military, as "repairable" electronics are an invitation to disaster. If an AN/PEQ-2 dies in service, the solution is to ship a new one to the unit that needs it, pronto. Expensive, yes, but a replacement can go in the pocket of whoever is riding to the unit that needs it. When they become obsolete, the government will simply buy new, better, ones.

For the rest of us, a repairable, and upgradable, box is something to be greatly desired.

The Raptar also comes with a remote switch, which has the same button controls as the main box itself. So, you can switch the light or laser on and off, and you can toggle through the settings. On the rear of the box is a rotating selector, which lets you set up the responses you get from each switch. They are Off, Function, and six light/laser combo settings. The Function setting allows you to set the display brightness, the laser power, read battery strength, and read out hardware configurations.

Wait! What did you say, display brightness? Yes, on the back of the Raptar Lite is the display that tells you what setting the control knob is set at. If you are working at night, or with NVG, you certainly don't want the display to be blasting off at the power setting you'd need to see it at high noon.

The IR flood also has a variable focus knob, so you can set it for a wide flood, or a narrower spot.

Inside the unit (not that I've performed surgery) Wilcox has constructed the laser parts as a single, self-contained suite, so when you adjust and zero the visible laser, the IR laser is also adjusted and centered.

The mounting system is perhaps the only fly in the ointment. Wilcox ships the Raptar with a M-1913 adapter rail section. You slide the adapter rail onto the 1913 rail, and use four locking screws to hold it in place. Then, you use the big center screw of the Raptar to bolt it to the adapter rail. This puts the Raptar a quarter-inch or so higher than it would otherwise be. It lets them fit the Raptar to a wide variety of firearms, but I think what I'll be doing, once I figure out what rifle this will stay on, is to drill and tap the rail for the threads of the Raptar, and bolt it directly to the rail. With a normal-height rail system, the Raptar does not block the iron sights, but I'd like it to be as compact and out-of-the-way as possible.

All of this comes in a ten-ounce package, running on a single 123 battery. Battery life depends, as it always does, on how much you use what. Wilcox tells us that we can expect seven hours of battery life on the laser, with the setting in high, and 1.3 hours for the visible light, with the lasers running. Given that it is a single battery, and they are common, I can live with that.

The battery is in a compartment on the right side, with a screw-cap cover, and you do not have to remove the Raptar from your rifle to change batteries.

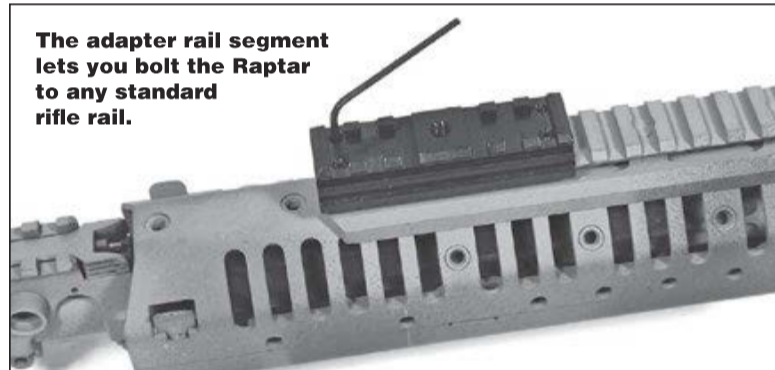

I have not been able to bring myself to conduct abuse tests on it, as it is too new, and too special, but given the durability of other items I've seen and tested from Wilcox, I suspect it would survive abuse better than I would. It comes in both basic black and whatever the current faddish brown is, coyote, FDE, baby-poop brown.

What we have here is a marvel; it is a IR laser and flood, a red laser, a white-light illuminator, and you can have your choices of the following; IR laser, IR flood, IR dual, visible laser, visible light, visible dual. If you want just the light, you don't have to change the setting. As long as the Raptar is powered on, pressing the Select button gets you directly to the visible light, and just the visible light. If you are working at night, say for hog whacking, then you can set it on IR dual, and when you press the switch, you get the night lit up for your NVG. That means you do not have to have an NVG sight, just a viewer, because the co-witnesses IR and visible laser (the visible laser which you bore-sighted and verified in the daylight) is your point of impact. Your Raptar just turned your basic NVG scope into an NVG weaponsight.

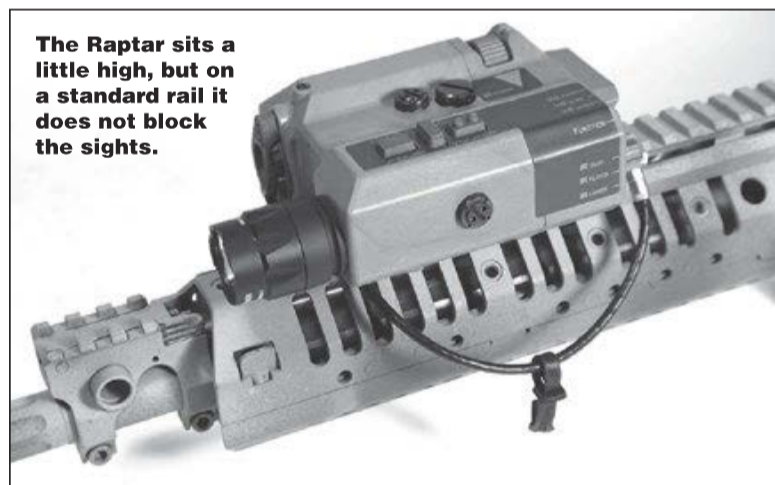

Usually, when I get new gear, I just slap in a battery (if it needs one) bolt it onto a rifle, and get to work. With the Raptar, I think I'm going to have to make myself a mocha latte, settle down with the CD/owners manual, and do some reading.

Included are instructions, a CD, a laser zero target, and the Raptar even comes with a battery to get you going.

The adapter rail segment lets you bolt the Raptar to any standard rifle rail.

The Raptar sits a little high, but on a standard rail it does not block the sights.

The price of progress is not without a cash cost. The Raptar Lite has an MSRP of $2,722. The Raptar has a price of $6,898.190. The Raptar S comes with a price tag of $8,602.72. But, if you want the bigger ones, you had best be in a potion to justify them, because with their mil-grade laser power, they will be going only to military units and police departments.

What has me really interested is the upgradability. When the price of the ballistics software/rangefinder unit comes down (and they will) then what will Wilcox charge to install them in the Lite version? Lasers, white light, rangefinder, the next thing you know, this thing will be K-Cup compatible. ©

LEUPOLD'S LCO

High-end glass
for high-end guns

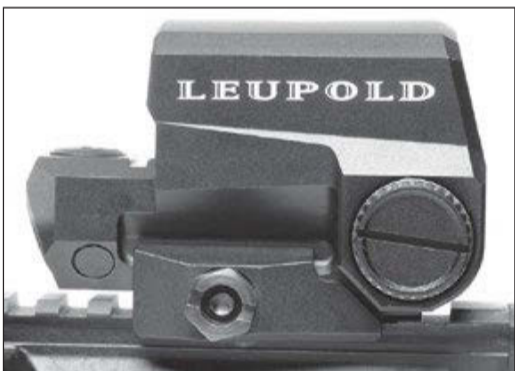

By David M. Fortier

When someone mentions the name Leupold & Stevens, what do you think of? Perhaps high-quality hunting scopes and time spent in the woods? Or maybe robust military-grade sniper scopes in the hands of America's finest in Iraq or Afghanistan? More than likely, however, a red dot sight is not what comes to mind. Before recently, Leupold has not entered the red dot market. If you were looking for a high end red dot or holographic sight Aimpoint and EOTech have traditionally been the names you sought. Or at least they were, until Leupold decided to challenge both of them with the introduction of their new Leupold Carbine Optic, or LCO. With the introduction of this high-end, military-grade red dot sight Leupold is taking on the big boys. The question I had was, were the boys from Oregon ready to stand toe-to-toe with these two favorites?

Leupold's new LCO is a well thought out, albeit very pricey, take on what a high-end red dot sight should offer the serious rifleman.

The Leupold Carbine Optic's battery box is on the right side of the sight. It's powered by one CR123A 3-volt lithium battery and has a claimed battery life of five years.

Compared to an Aimpoint or EOTech, the LCO is closer in appearance to an EOTech with its rectangular shape and large window. It's machined from a block of 6061-T6 aluminum and appears robust with an integral mount cut into the bottom. It sports a matte finish and has prominent white markings that will appeal to some. Others might find it a bit gaudy. Examining it you'll note a battery compartment on the right side of the body. The thread-on cap to this is easily removed with a cartridge case, coin or screwdriver but is not retained by a lanyard. Power is provided by one CR123A 3-volt lithium battery and Leupold claims a battery life of up to 5 years. However, I was unable to find in any of their literature what intensity setting upon which that figure was based. Durability-wise the LCO is fogproof and waterproof to 66 feet.

On the left side of the body is the on/off switch. This consists of a button in the center of a knob that controls [Cont. to page 21]

[Cont. from page 20] the intensity of the 1-MOA dot. Simply push it to turn the unit on and hold it in for three seconds to turn it off. The LCO provides 16 brightness settings and is night vision compatible. Rotate the knob counter-clockwise to increase intensity and clockwise to decrease. When it reaches its brightest setting the dot will blink two times. Perhaps one of its more interesting features is its ability to go into sleep mode, which shuts the dot off after it has remained completely motionless for more than 15 minutes. This will greatly lengthen battery life. Better still, any movement or vibration immediately turns it back on. This means that you can leave it turned to your desired brightness setting while sitting in the corner of your bedroom without running the battery down. Then, if something goes bump in the night and you grab your rifle the LCO will turn itself back on as soon as it detects movement. It's ready to take care of business before you are.

The on/off button is located inside the rheostat on the left side of the site. It has 16 intensity settings and is night vision compatible.

The wide field of view works very well with back up iron sights as this rear view shows.

I mounted and zeroed the LCO on an AR-15 without issue. It features .5 MOA adjustments and zeroing can be performed using just a cartridge rim or coin. The unit is easy to turn on and off and it has audible and tactile clicks for each intensity setting. I had no issues obtaining an intensity level to my liking in various bright/low/no light situations. On the positive side, the rheostat is very easy to find and adjust, even wearing gloves. There are no small buttons to try to find, perhaps in the dark with cold, wet or numb fingers. Plus, because the rheostat is placed on the side, and not the back, it is not obstructed if you mount a magnifier or Leupold D-EVO behind the LCO.

How does it compare to its two greatest rivals, the Aimpoint T-1 and EOTech EXPS3? Good question. To find out I compared the LCO to both. Of the three Aimpoint's T1 is by far the smallest and lightest, weighing just 3 ounces without a mount. The large rheostat on the T1 is easy to manipulate yet will not spin accidentally. Plus, the T1 is highly regarded for its durability. It is a very tough and reliable sight with a claimed battery life of more than 5 years. In comparison the LCO is bigger and heavier. However, it matches the Aimpoint's battery life and it offers a much larger window. The larger window is an asset when using back up iron sights or a night vision device (NVD) such as a PVS-14. The LCO also offers a finer 1 MOA dot compared to the 2 or 4 MOA dot offered on the T1. The T1 is waterproof to 80 feet compared to the LCO's 66 feet.

Comparing the LCO to the EXPS3 from EOTech we find the LCO to be smaller and slightly lighter. The EOTech weighs in at 11.2 ounces while the LCO weighs 9.5 ounces. In use I preferred the LCO's round knob over the EXPS3's buttons. Both feature a 1 MOA aiming dot, but the EXPS3 also has a reticle around it. Both have nice large windows but the EXPS3 has the added feature of a protective metal cover over the top to protect against impacts. The EXPS3 also has the battery cover attached to [Cont. to page 22]

[Cont. from page 21] the body via a lanyard. This is handy if you've ever changed batteries in the dark using a PVS-14 and had to search for a dropped battery cover. On the flip side, the battery life of the LCO is measured in years while the battery-munching holographic sight's is measured in hours. Plus, the LCO is waterproof to 66 feet compared to the EXPS3's 33 feet.

A look at the front of the optic, note the aluminum body does not extend in front of the objective to shield it from rain.

Leupold's LCO works very well with their Dual-Enhanced View Optic or D-EVO, which is an interesting 6x scope designed to sit behind, and see around, a traditional red dot sight.

Aimpoint's T1 is a favorite of mine due to its compact size, reliability and long battery life. However, it's not my choice if I might stick a PVS-14 behind it. The tiny window of the T1 degrades the performance of a PVS-14 too much in my opinion. I find the EXPS3 to be a bit big and chunky, but it works fairly well with a NVD behind it. The LCO seems to have most of the best features of both. It has a nice big window, yet is smaller and weighs less than the EXPS3. Better still it has a super long battery life and a sleep mode. Is the LCO perfect? No, I did notice a muzzle side light signature visible depending upon the angle of the optic. Plus, I wish the body extended further over both the ocular and objective lenses to protect them from rain and impacts.

All in the LCO performed very well and I came away impressed by it. I think many shooters will be very interested in this sight. Or at least they will be until they learn its suggested retail price is a jaw-dropping $1,249.99. That's $570 more than the EXPS3! It's also substantially more than the Aimpoint. While the LCO is a good sight, it's likely priced too high for most commercial sales. If your wallet does open that wide the LCO is backed by Leupold's Golden Ring Full Lifetime Guarantee.

BAR

PRIDE OF THE MARINE CORPS OR ONE OF JOHN BROWNING'S LESSER DESIGNS?

This classic full-auto perfectly fulfilled its original requirements, but less than adequately served in a LMG role for which it wasn't originally intended.

Text and photos by Peter G. Kokalis

On April 6th, 1917, a state of war was declared between the United States and the Imperial German Government. The same day a secret report was sent to the U.S. military's high command indicating that the inventory of machine guns consisted of only 670 Benét-Mercié, 282 Model 1904 Maxim and 158 Colt Model 1895 "Potato Digger" machine guns, a total of only 1,100.

Meanwhile, three years prior, Germany entered World War I with 12,500 Maxim Model 1908 machine guns and 50,000 more under construction. As a consequence, the United States Expeditionary Force was initially armed with the truly dreadful Chauchat Machine Rifle, chambered for the 8mm Lebel rimmed cartridge. Eventually, the Chauchat was chambered for the U.S. .30-'06 service cartridge with even more disastrous results.

Prior to the United States' entry into the war, the legendary John M. Browning personally brought to Washington, D.C. a water-cooled machine gun that was to become the superb Model 1917 and a machine rifle, later to be known by the troops as simply the "BAR" (Browning Automatic Rifle), Model 1918. Both were chambered for the .30-'06 cartridge.

The BAR was designed to respond to the U.S. Army's requirement for what, at that time, was termed "walking fire," a concept thought to be essential in trench warfare. The first live-fire demonstration of both the water-cooled machine gun and the machine rifle occurred

Although the M1918A2 BAR was first issued in 1940, many World-War-I-era M1918 BARs were still pressed into service during the early years of World War II.

Model of 1918 in February of that year. The first 1,800 specimens did not have interchangeable components, and production was halted until this situation was solved. By the end of the war, Winchester was manufacturing 300 BARs each and every day. However, in a manner all too typical of most military institutions, at the time of the Armistice, 63,000 BARs were canceled.

Marlin-Rockwell Corporation purchased the May Radiator Company's plant to produce the BAR. Their first specimen was made on 11 June 1918 and by 11 November 1918 they were turning out 200 machine rifles a day. The postwar Marlin-Rockwell cancellation was for 93,000 weapons.

Because of their commitments for handguns and other small arms, Colt's produced only 9,000 BARs prior to the Armistice. The combined daily production of all three manufacturers was 706 and a total of approximately 52,000 Browning Automatic Rifles was delivered from all sources.

The BAR arrived in France in July of 1918, fielded by the U.S. Army's 79th Division, the first unit to which they were issued, and first saw battle on 13 September 1918, when 2nd Lt. Val A. Browning, the inventor's son, fired a BAR at the German trenches. The 80th Division, already on the ground in France, was the second unit to be issued the Browning Automatic Rifle.

Interestingly, the BAR was more enthusiastically received by Western European forces than the water-cooled Browning M1917, principally because the Maxim '08 and its derivative, the Vickers, water-cooled machine guns were already well established and battle-proven. The French immediately requested 15,000 BARs to replace the awful Chauchat Machine Rifle.

The Model of 1918 Browning Machine Rifle was made by Colt's Patent Fire Arms Co. Barrel markings include the U.S. Ordnance bomb and a 1918 manufacturing date.

Controls are on the left side, (from top): the spring-loaded bolt guide, the non-reciprocating retracting handle, the selector lever, marked "S", "A" and "F" and the trigger with the magazine catch directly in front of it.

on 27 February 1917 at a site called Congress Heights, just outside the city limits of Washington, D.C.

It was attended by 300 people, composed of high-ranking military officials, politicians, and military representatives from Great Britain, France, Belgium and Italy, and the local press. Although a decision on the water-cooled gun was delayed to permit Browning more time to perfect the weapon, the BAR was adopted immediately, as a consequence of the demonstration at Congress Heights.

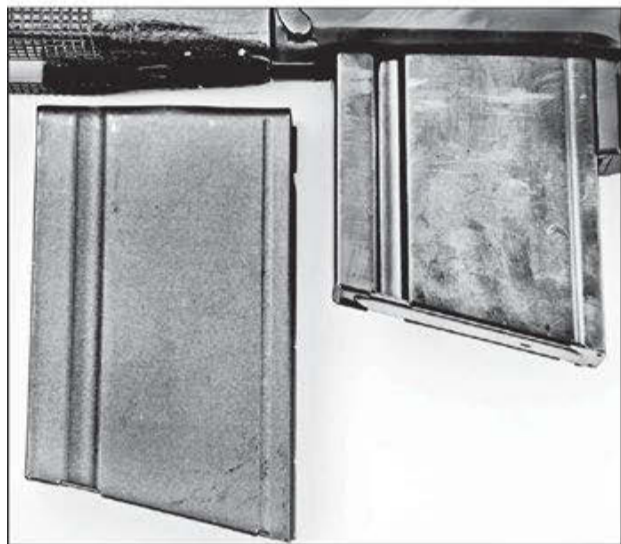

John Browning conducted the majority of the early developmental work on the BAR at the Colt's Patent Fire Arms Company, with engineering assistance from Winchester, which was the first to start production on the

When the M1918 BAR was issued to the troops of the 79th Division, some unique and important gear was distributed with the gun. Each BAR gunner was issued web gear that consisted of a short pistol belt to which was

The bottom-fed magazine means the BAR's capacity was effectively limited to 20 rounds. A bigger magazine would have "monopodded" on the magazine's floorplate.

In contrast to other contemporaneous magazine-fed light machine guns, the BAR has no quick-change barrel, an absolute requirement for a squad automatic.

Kokalis cites the follower spring as a weak point in BAR magazines. They could not be kept loaded for long or the springs could "take a set" and lose power.

attached a group of pouches at each end. The left side contained three two-magazine cells for the BAR. The right side had one two-magazine pouch for the BAR and one two-magazine pouch for the M1911 pistol the gunner also carried. In the center, a black steel, oval-shaped cup with a leather back held the BAR's butt when the gunner was firing from the hip-assault position during "walking fire."

The specimen in my collection was made by a company called "LONG," the pouch elements in April of 1918 and the belt portion of the system in May of 1918.

The assistant gunner was issued similar webbing, except that each side had two two-magazine pouches for the BAR and one two-cell pouch that held half-moon clips for the Smith & Wesson or Colt's Model 1917 .45 ACP revolvers. The one that I have is marked "1067 P.B. & CO. 2nd ASST. LEFT (or RIGHT) BROWNING COLT 9-1918." Forty years ago when I obtained them, these two pieces of LBE for the M1918 BAR were quite common. They have all gone into advanced machine gun collections and are now all but impossible to locate.

Other equipment issued with the M1918 BAR included the important gas cylinder cleaning tool, combination tool, ruptured case extractor, chamber cleaning brush, three-piece cleaning rod and pouch, flat tip screwdriver, leather "three hook" sling, magazine loader and a spare parts bag, containing a trigger connector, extractor, firing pin, extractor spring, recoil spring, trigger guard retaining pin assembly, gas cylinder tube retaining pin assembly, change and stop lever spring, magazine catch spring and sear spring.

I personally inventory several extractors and firing pins. The BAR's extractor is a weak point in the design and they fail with a fair degree of regularity.

In addition, you will need at least one copy of any of the several editions of Department of the Army Field Manual, FM 23-15, entitled, "BROWNING AUTOMATIC RIFLE CAL .30, M1918A2." In my opinion, the best and most desirable edition is Korean War era version of July 1951.

Method of Operation

The Browning Automatic Rifle is a gas-operated and locked-breech weapon with an adjustable gas regulator. Breech locking is by means of a propped toggle link at the rear end of the bolt, which is raised against a locking shoulder in the top of the receiver body.

It fires from the open-bolt position, which reduces the possibility of "cook-offs." The original Model 1918 BAR is capable of both semiautomatic and full-auto fire with a cyclic rate of 600 rounds per minute. The BAR uses 20-round, two-position-feed, staggered-column, detachable box magazines. This never changed throughout its several model improvements, and the flat, accordion-type follower springs used represented very old technology and easily lost their compression strength. As a consequence BAR magazines should never be stored fully loaded for even short periods of time.

The sequence of operation is as follows. Insert a loaded magazine. Retract the cocking handle until the bolt assembly is held rearward. Push the cocking handle all the way forward. It does not reciprocate with the recoiling components.

The BAR was based upon the concept of "walking fire" out of which was also derived the Chauchat, quite possibly the worst automatic weapon ever fielded.

The gunner's belt held eight 20-round magazines, two magazines for his M1911 pistol and a black steel, oval-shaped cup with a leather back to hold the butt.

Pulling the trigger will allow the bolt group and slide and piston assembly to go forward, while stripping a round from the magazine, and then chambering and firing it.

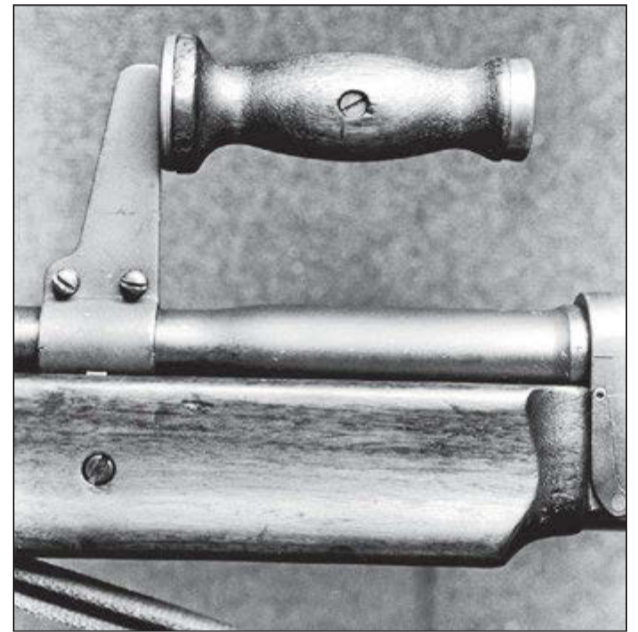

As the projectile passes the gas port, expanding propellant gases enter the gas cylinder, forcing the piston and slide assembly rearward. The rear end of the piston/slide is attached to the bolt lock, which operates on a hinge on top of the bolt.

As the slide is driven rearward, the bolt lock is hinged downward and thus out of its locking recess in the top of the receiver. As unlocking is completed, the bolt group and slide continue rearward as a unit, extracting and subsequently ejecting the empty case. The recoil stroke of the reciprocating components terminates when the slide impinges against the buffer assembly in the buttstock. The recoil spring subsequently returns the slide and bolt groups in counter recoil, repeating the firing cycle.

The M1918 BAR's walnut buttstock has a classic infantry rifle configuration that was originally intended for "walking fire" from the hip assault position.

As the BAR gained weight, it got harder and harder to carry, especially when hot. A carrying handle attached to the barrel made the load easier to bear.

The gas regulator has three positions, and on the face of the gas cylinder are three circles of different size. These circles correspond to the size of the three gas ports within the gas cylinder assembly.

To adjust gas on the small port, first unlock the gas cylinder assembly by partially forcing out the gas cylinder lock with either the combination tool or the point of a cartridge. Screw the gas cylinder assembly all the way in until it's finger tight. Then back the gas cylinder assembly off one complete turn.

The M1918A2 was issued with both hardwood and plastic buttstocks. The hinged buttplate keeps the butt from sliding down the shoulder when in sustained fire.

The partially checkered walnut forearm of the original M1918 Browning Machine Rifle was later changed to unchecked walnut with a finger groove on each side.

The flash hider is unimpressive in appearance by today's standards, but it's quite effective. The front sight could be drifted in its dovetail for windage.

Next, turn the gas cylinder assembly so that the smallest circle (look at the face of the gas cylinder assembly) passes through the shortest distance to a position directly under the barrel. Lock the gas cylinder assembly by pushing in the gas cylinder lock.

If upon firing, the weapon exhibits insufficient gas, first attempt to obtain a better alignment on the small port. If there is still insufficient gas, unlock the gas cylinder assembly and unscrew it two complete turns. Lock the gas cylinder assembly and attempt to fire. If there is still insufficient gas, adjust the gas cylinder on the next larger port. Sound confusing? It is and just try doing this when the gas cylinder is hot.

The M1918 BAR sights are typical of the time. The blade front sight has no protective ears. It can be drifted in its dovetail for adjustment of windage zero, but by unit armorers only. The ladder-type rear sight has protective ears built into its base. The main peep aperture can be adjusted for elevation in 100-yard increments from 200 to 900 yards and in 50-yard increments from 900 to 1,600 yards. There is a battle-sight aperture as well, but no provision for windage adjustment.

The BAR Marches Forward (Sort Of)

In the U.S. Army, the BAR and its presumed tactical applications changed very little after World War I. In 1920, Fabrique Nationale d'Armes de Guerre in Liege, Belgium, obtained a license to manufacture and distribute the weapon in Europe under the designation Herstal Light Machine Gun. The FN version was fitted with both a bipod and a pistol grip behind the trigger guard.

In the meantime, Colt's manufactured the BAR in a number of commercial versions. One, equipped with a bipod and pistol grip, was offered and sold to the military organizations of a number of foreign governments in fairly substantial quantities. In 1933, Colt's offered a model called the Colt Monitor as a law enforcement and bank guard weapon. It featured a shortened barrel with a Cutts Compensator of the type found on the Thompson submachine gun and a pistol grip.

A number of nations purchased substantial quantities of the Browning Automatic Rifles manufactured by both Fabrique Nationale and Colt's. FN sold its version to China and Poland chambered for the 7.92x57mm cartridge and a very few to France in the 7.5x54mm round standardized in 1924. It was adopted by Sweden in 1921 chambered for the 6.5x55mm round with a distinctive, slightly curved magazine and a vertical pistol grip.

The British tested the BAR and provisionally adopted it. However, it was never placed into production, and in 1936 they adopted the far superior Bren Light Machine Gun. During World War II, when Great Britain was threatened by invasion from Nazi Germany, substantial quantities of original Model 1918 BARs were sent for use by the British Home Guard under the Lend Lease program. Substantial numbers returned and now reside in private U.S. machine gun collections.

Back in the United States, field-training exercises by the U.S. Army demonstrated a need for a bipod to improve accuracy, plus some small modifications to the mechanism. However, in a manner all too familiar to those who have studied the history of small arms development and

The M1918 peep aperture rear sight has protective ears and can be adjusted for elevation, but not for windage. There is a battle-sight aperture as well.

To adjust gas on the small port, first unlock the gas cylinder assembly and then force out the gas cylinder lock as shown. Try doing this when the BAR is hot!

adoption by the U.S. military, except for the Model 1922, which differed for the original version only by a bipod attached to the barrel and gas cylinder directly in front of the forearm, issued in almost miniscule quantities to the U.S. Cavalry, no new Browning Automatic Rifles were obtained by the Army and M1918 version remained in service until 1937 (and well into World War II in somewhat modified form by the Marine Corps).

In 24 June of 1937, the U.S. Army's Ordnance Department finally authorized some changes to the M1918 that would more or less transform it into a light machine gun. The M1918A1 as standardized was equipped with a bipod attached to the gas cylinder tube, just in front of the forearm and a hinged buttplate for support in sustained fire. The bipod had two hinged legs with spiked feet and was attached to the gas cylinder tube with a split clamp and four screws.

The forearm was shorter than the M1918's and was cut away from the barrel for increased ventilation. The M1918A1 weighed 18.5 pounds, compared to 16 pounds for the M1918. Very few M1918A1 BARs were ever issued before the Army decided to further modify the gun into what became the most prevalent and famous model of the BAR, the M1918A2, which was first issued in 1940.

A dimensional comparison between the original M1918 and the M1918A2 reveals how much the changes discussed below affected the overall envelope. The overall length was only increased from 47 inches to 47.8 inches. The different flash hiders used on the M1918A2 during World War II and then subsequently during the Korean War altered the barrel length from 24 inches to 24¹/₁₆ inches.

The rifling remained the same at four grooves with a 1:10 right-hand twist, which is conventional for the .30-'06 standard military M2 ball cartridge. The biggest difference was increased weight, which went from 16 pounds to 19.4 pounds, with an empty magazine. Most of the weight increase was due to the addition of the bipod, which itself weighs 2.38 pounds.

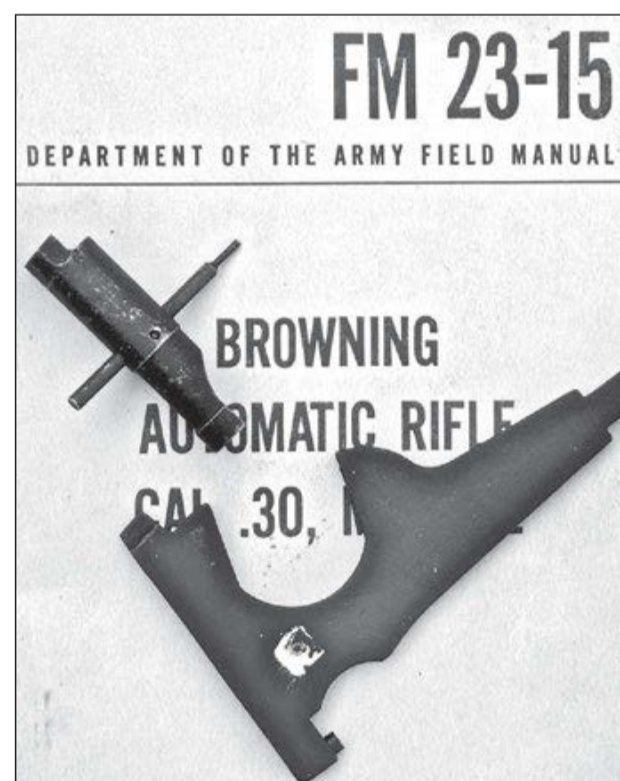

The bipod was moved forward to the muzzle; mounted on a redesigned flash hider that screwed onto the barrel and served as a bearing surface for the bipod assembly. During the Korean War, the M1918A2 flash hider was changed from a cylindrical-type to a tapered, three-prong flash suppressor.

The selective-fire option of the M1918 was changed to a dual rate of full-auto fire only: fast (approximately 550 rpm—rotate the selector lever until it strikes against the selector lever stop, marked "A") and slow (approximately 350 rpm—the selector lever's forward position, marked "F").

The Marine Corps preferred the original semiautomatic and full-auto options, and converted a substantial number of M1918A2 BARs back to that type of fire and in addition, modified a number of original M1918 BARs to M1918A2 configuration except for the fire control system.

The M1918A2 has a walnut buttstock with the hinged buttplate of the M1918A1 and a fixture at the bottom for attachment of a monopod that was never issued. During the Korean War, a synthetic buttstock was used. The rear sight was improved, but still attaches to the dovetail on top of the receiver. A clip-on, stamped, sheet metal front sight protector was installed. The forearm was shortened.

You will need the U.S. Army's detailed, but sometimes confusing, FM 23-15, shown here with the very important BAR gas regulator tool and combination tool.

The magazine well/trigger guard was redesigned. All of these modifications increased the weight to 19.4 pounds.

A carrying handle, of the type found on the Browning M1919A6 .30-'06, belt-fed, air-cooled Light Machine Gun (LMG) was adopted for the BAR in December of 1944. As World War II ended shortly thereafter, this piece of equipment saw no significant service until the Korean War. Clamped to the barrel near the center of mass by two screws, it consists of a sheet metal clamp and a pivoting steel rod that holds the wooden handle. While useful, it did not address the BAR's core problems.

The bottom-feeding magazine meant the BAR's capacity was forever limited to 20 rounds. A magazine of greater capacity would have "monopoded" on the floor-plate when fired from the prone position, which provides the gunner with maximum cover from enemy fire and offers the most stable firing platform. The French Chatellerault Model 1924/29 LMG has a 25-round magazine and the illustrious British Bren LMG has a 28-round magazine. Both are top-fed. The predecessor of the Bren, the Czech ZBvz26 LMG, also top-fed, could make use of 40-round magazines intended for anti-aircraft fire, although in practice they were rarely fielded. The Madsen and Nambu LMGs also were top fed, so the BAR configuration is the exception rather than the rule.

However, in my opinion, the most serious mistake was to relocate the bipod from just in front of the forearm on the gas cylinder tube to the muzzle of the M1918A2. This made the weapon extremely difficult to lift and pivot in order to engage rapidly moving enemy targets on the flanks, an all too common tactical event on the battlefield.

The M1918A2 bipod position, a reversion back to the M1909 Benét-Mercié, so impaired flexibility that the bipod was frequently discarded by BAR teams. This, of course, brought the weapon's tactical capabilities back to that of the original M1918. During World War I, it was clearly demonstrated that the BAR, firing from the open bolt, was inaccurate when fired from the shoulder semi-automatically, and even more so when fired unsupported in full-auto.

When the M1918A2 was fired at 2x3-inch targets at 1,000 inches (the method by which machine gunners practiced elevation and traverse fire) from the prone position off its muzzle-mounted bipod in a 20-round burst, 16 of 20 shots (80%) usually grouped into less than 2x2 inches. This is superior to results with the tripod-mounted Browning M1917 water-cooled medium machine gun.

Thus, by merely attaching at bipod to its muzzle, the BAR passed from a weapon entirely too inaccurate in any mode of fire to one that puts its bullets in almost the same hole.

Remembering that machine guns are, in theory, "area" target weapons, not "point" target weapons, at combat ranges of 100 to 600 yards, the BAR M1918A2 is nearly completely lacking in a useful distribution of fire and fulfilling a key tactical role of the light machine gun. It would have served far greater ends on the battlefield if the BAR's bipod had been left where it was on the M1918A1 and where it was located on the Bren LMG.

In comparison with other contemporaneous magazine-fed light machine guns, the BAR exhibits one other really serious deficiency. It has no quick-change barrel, an absolute requirement for a squad automatic. The United States never fielded a BAR with a quick-change barrel. A Korean War veteran, who was an armorer in the U.S. Army during that conflict, told me that he changed BAR barrels with a pipe wrench during the war to get them back in service as quickly as possible.

Shortly after World War II, Fabrique Nationale d'Armes de Guerre introduced the Model D BAR. It had a 21½-inch quick-change barrel with a series of 30 quite useless radial cooling fins at the rear. To remove the barrel, press in the locking lever on the right side of the receiver, turn the carrying handle upward to the

While the BAR is not the hardest machine gun to disassemble, it's not the easiest, thanks to the spring-loaded bolt guide that keeps the bolt group in place.

Kokalis rates the Bren gun above the BAR, thanks to its quick-change barrel, excellent bipod location, reliability and a large-capacity, top-fed magazine.

vertical position and push forward. The entire process takes longer to describe than accomplish. But, it proved to be too little, too late and was adopted by only Belgium, Luxembourg and Egypt.

A BAR barrel can probably tolerate 75 to 100 shots per minute for up to 300 to 400 rounds before serious damage to the barrel occurs. Firing rates in combat often exceed that. In one test, an M1918A2 BAR's barrel was ruined after 1,000 rounds were fired in succession at the normal rate of 550 rpm. This inability to rapidly change barrels on the battlefield is a major design defect indeed.

To wrap up my assessment of this "pride of the Marine Corps," I have already mentioned the difficulty of changing the gas regulator precisely just when you need to do so during a firefight. Another weak point in the BAR's design that I have also mentioned are the extractors, which I can tell you from my personal experience fail frequently.

So, was this one of Browning's lesser designs? At the risk of infuriating Marine Corps veterans and amateur small arms history buffs, it most certainly was, in my opinion.

But that was largely a consequence of the design parameters Browning was forced to accept from the U.S. Army Ordnance Department. Because of the concept around which the French Chauchat Machine Rifle was developed: trench warfare in which a light, automatic weapon was deployed by means of "walking fire" with firing from the hip; and the U.S. Army's acceptance of that tactical application at the time, a true light machine gun design was rejected. When it was subsequently acknowledged after World War I that the Army actually needed a light machine gun, as trench warfare was unlikely in the future, the attempt to create a purse out of a sow's ear was not totally successful. What do I like most about my mint Colt's World-War-I-era M1918? Not much, except for its value, which is now more than $35,000.

During World War II, the New England Small Arms Corporation manufactured 188,380 M1918A2 BARs and International Business Machines (IBM) produced 20,000. Thus the total number of BARs made during World War II was 208,380. During the Korean War, fought on both side with the small arms of World War II, the Royal McBee Typewriter Company added another approximately 61,000 M1918A2 BARs to the United States inventory.

Slings

The original leather sling for the M1918 BAR was a direct derivative of the U.S. M1907 sling and of the same length, 48 inches. The only difference is that the BAR sling has three hooks instead of two. These slings are almost impossible to locate now. Toward the end of World War II, the leather BAR sling was replaced by a web sling, which was somewhat longer than the one attached to the .30 M1 Garand rifle.

Richard L. Turner, a retired Gunnery Sergeant of the USMC, has been making M1918A2 BAR three-hook MilSpec slings for more than 20 years. Turner Saddlery (Dept. SGN, P.O. Box 120, Clay, AL 35048-0120; phone:

205-680-9377; email: tursad@aol.com; website: www.turnersling.com) also makes the famous U.S. M1907 sling and a unique variant. The AWS (All Weather Sling) model is made from Biothane, a PVC vinyl-coated webbing. This webbing is not dyed, but instead woven from black polyester filaments and then coated with a PVC-Vinyl.

The AWS sling is non-reflective, virtually unbreakable, and will not crack or stretch. It has the same temper and flex as a well broken-in leather sling. The breaking strength of the sling is in excess of 2,400 pounds, prior to punching the holes. The holes are rated at over 275 foot pounds per hole, which would require over 550 foot pounds to compromise when using the sling hook inserted in the rifle sling as intended. It's now available in black, brown, olive drab green and desert tan.

The U.S. M1907 military sling is the finest piece of equipment of its type ever devised for enhancing the stability required to shoot a large-caliber rifle accurately. No other sling has ever been designed or fielded by any army in the world that can even remotely be compared to the U.S. M1907 sling. It remains forever a symbol that we were indeed once a nation of riflemen above all others in the world. The only problem is that currently troops in the U.S. Army do not know how to deploy with it.

Turner's M1918A2 BAR three-hook MilSpec sling is made from English bridle leather. It costs only $52.95. The one Richard made for me has blackened brass hooks, which would be correct for a World-War-I-era BAR. Currently, Turner only has Parkerized steel hooks available. They were issued in place of brass hooks starting around 1943. Turner expects to have blackened brass hooks again sometime by the end of 2010. He can also make it an AWS-type, if requested.

Easy Disassembly, Ha!

Disassembly and reassembly procedures are explained in explicit detail in the easily located FM 23-15 and there's no need to repeat them here, with the exception of two comments. First, there is a very big white lie in the Army Field Manual, as it says, "The rifle has been designed so that it may be taken apart and put together easily."

This is simply not true. While the BAR is not the most difficult to field strip of all the substantial number of machine guns that I have worked on, it is by no means the easiest. In particular, in order to withdraw the bolt group from the receiver, the spring-loaded bolt guide on the left side of the receiver, directly above the retracting handle's slot, must be pried outward.

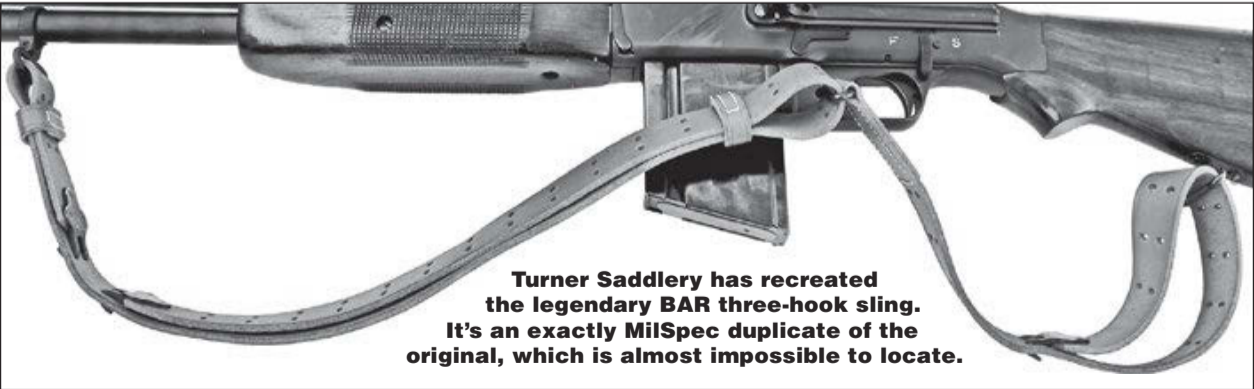

The manual says to use the base of a dummy cartridge. This is virtually impossible, as the single-wire bolt-guide retaining spring is quite strong. In some cases it's best to remove the spring from inside the receiver body and then completely withdraw the bolt guide. Then, upon reassembly, you're only faced with the monumental tasking of reinstalling the bolt guide and its spring.

One final comment on this topic: there is one key internal component that can be installed upside down, the hammer. If this is done, the weapon will not function—a somewhat dangerous scenario if it takes place on the battlefield. ©

BROWNING AUTOMATIC RIFLE M1918/M1918A2 SPECIFICATIONS
Caliber:	.30-'06.
Method of operation:	Gas operated with a three-position regulator. Breech locking is by means of a propped toggle link at the rear end of the bolt, which is raised against a locking shoulder in the top of the receiver body. Fires from the open bolt position.
Type of fire:	M1918—semiautomatic and full-auto M1918A2—two rates of full-auto fire only.
Cyclic rate of fire:	M1918—600 rpm; M1918A2—350 and 550 rpm.
Method of feed:	20-round, two-position-feed, staggered-column, detachable box magazine.
Barrel:	4-groove with a 1:10 right-hand twist.
Barrel lengths:	M1918—24 inches; M1918A2—24 1/16 inches.
Overall lengths:	M1918—47 inches; M1918A2—47.8 inches.
Weights, with empty magazine:	M1918—16 pounds; M1918A2—19.4 pounds.
Sights:	M1918—blade-type front sight, aperture type battle sight adjustable for elevation only, from 200 to 1,600 yards; M1918A2—blade-type front sight with clip-on protector, peep aperture rear sight adjustable for elevation and windage.
Manufacturers:	World War I—Colt's Patent Fire Arms Company, Winchester Repeating Arms Company, and Marlin-Rockwell Corp. World War II—New England Arms Corporation and International Business Machines. Korean War—Royal McBee Typewriter Company.
Status:	No longer in service.
T&E summary: Lack of a quick-change barrel and a bottom-fed magazine with a capacity of only 20 rounds were serious design defects. Poor bipod placement and weak extractors were also major deficiencies, as well as a gas regulator that was difficult to adjust when hot. Not one of John Browning's better designs, although a great deal of misplaced mystique and nostalgia is still attached to it by aging veterans and those with no tangible experience.

Turner Saddlery has recreated the legendary BAR three-hook sling. It's an exactly MilSpec duplicate of the original, which is almost impossible to locate.

SHOTGUN NEWS COLUMNIST FRANK JAMES DIES

By Robert W. Hunnicutt

Longtime Shotgun News Handgun Editor Frank James died Sept. 15. He was 69. James was unique among gunwriters in that his fulltime occupation was as a grain farmer in Indiana. In addition to his columnist duties for SGN, he wrote for other OSG titles like Handguns and Shooting Times, as well as competitive titles in this country and several European magazines.

He appeared regularly as a handgun expert on Davidson's Gallery of Guns on the Sportsman Channel and on Gun Stories on the Outdoor Channel. He was an avid pistol competitor and machine gun shooter who wrote Project 64: The MP5 Submachine Gun Story.

I first got to know him on a press junket to Spain in 1991. I think it was the first time he'd been out of the country, and he didn't immediately take to the cuisine of the Basque Country, which is heavy on the fish. The hosts were wondering why James was subsisting entirely on steak and beer.

When I pointed out that the fish and wine were world-class, James held fast. "I'm from Indiana," he said. "we eat steak and drink beer." Although I'm not sure he ever changed his dinner preferences, he became very popular in Europe, appearing in a range of magazines on the Continent and developing excellent relationships with many old-country manufacturers.

Frank had some hard luck in his time. His teenaged daughter was killed in a traffic accident, and shortly after selling off his farm equipment for retirement, he suffered a stroke that ended his writing and television career. But like a true farmer, he maintained a cheerful outlook, with a loud, cackling laugh that could be heard all over the firing line or show floor. Those of us who knew him will miss him, and I'm sure those of you who read him will, too. ©

BCM GUNFIGHTER™

BCMGUNFIGHTER™ Pistol Grip

- Reduced grip angle keeps wrist in line for improved trigger control
- Hinged Trap Door interior storage with water resistant rubber gasket
- Mod 0 similar to A1/A2 backstrap, Mod 1 with high rise backstrap
- Mod 2 up to 1/4 inch wider with interchangeable backstraps/inserts
- Mod 3 up to 1/4 inch wider with high rise backstrap/extended insert
- All Mods available in Black, Flat Dark Earth, Foliage Green, Wolf Gray

BCMGUNFIGHTER Pistol Grips Prices start at $17.95

BCMGUNFIGHTER™ Vertical Grip

- Forward angle increases rigidity of the forearm, provides more natural wrist angle
- Featuring an aggressive texture, and generous storage volume
- Cross bolt designed to work with improvised tools
- Reversible clamp for fastener setup on either side
- Made in the U.S.A. from high quality, impact resistant polymers
- Available in Black, Flat Dark Earth, Foliage Green and Wolf Gray

BCMGUNFIGHTER VG - Screw Mount . . . $39.95

BCMGUNFIGHTER™ VG

- Low-profile length for increased mobility and decreased "snag" factor
- The forward angle increases the rigidity of the forearm, while providing a more natural wrist angle
- Can be mounted in reverse angle to increase control when grabbing handguard and grip
- Flat sides with aggressive texture give better control to the shooter
- Anchor and bolt system offers a simple and robust design, while maintaining a light-weight 1.9 ounces
- Made in the U.S.A. from high quality, impact resistant polymers
- Available in Black, Flat Dark Earth, Foliage Green and Wolf Gray

www.sarcoinc.com

Original Spanish Army assault rifle parts set as issued between 1984 to 1999. A cross over rifle platform developed from the CETME (C) model taking some inspiration from the FNC design which competed for Nato trials around the same time. Like the FNC, the CETME C also would accept M-16 magazines and the 5.56 Nato round. Moreover, the comfort of holding, aiming, and shooting made this platform superior to the G-3 styled rifles and it's truly ergonomic design made it a world class combat rifle. We like the fact that it is very much a 'minimalist' component oriented rifle with fewer parts to manage than an FAL or G3. This year is the first year ever that we have been able to obtain these extremely rare gun kits. We plan to offer barrels and receivers as we bring this program along, but take heed that at the moment, we have a very limited supply of the kits so don't suffer in the long run from buyers 'remorse' when they are gone! Act now to secure one! Parts set comes with all parts shown. The kit may be missing a spring and detent from the rear sight and the windage screw tip may be missing. The kit does not come with a barrel or receiver. The trunnion does come with the kit. These kits have the Spanish Army green colored finish although parts are used and furniture may have some cosmetic blemishes, but are serviceable. The parts are actually quite rugged and they had to be, as the system of firing was by delayed blowback with a bolt traveling on 2 rollers for both acceleration to forward firing and 'delay to extract', by compensating for pressure release. Firing rate for this rifle was between 600 - 750 rds per minute which made it faster than the G3 and equal to and greater than the firing rate of the AK-74!

VETERANS DAY NOVEMBER 11, 2015

SPANISH CETME (L) PARTS SET, 5.56 NATO

Celebrating U.S. Veterans

Celebrating U.S. Veterans....All November Long... As we all struggle with difficulties through out life, we must always remember the millions of American citizens who propelled themselves out of the margins of safety, in order to serve for the common defense of our nation during times of peace and of war.

Sarco Inc. loves all of our Veterans, our Nation, and urges everyone to reach out to veterans and thank them for their self-sacrifice and service to us all! God Bless America and its sons and daughters!

Honoring Americans

Hilda Steffler
(Women's Army Corps WW2)

Volunteered as soon as she was of age, worked with hundreds of wounded soldiers while serving in the Nursing unit, El Paso, Tx. Met her husband in the Army, and brought up a family of four fine children instilling in them goodness, patriotism, and self-sacrifice.

RUSSIAN PPSH-41 SMG (non-firing)

Truly one of the world's first class sub machine guns of WW2 & beyond. Over 5 million produced and many of them came face to face with U.S. servicemen in Korea and Vietnam. Spewing a voracious 900+ rds. a minute with 7.62x25 Tokarev ammo, this gun demanded respect, especially when the Soviets outfitted entire Companies of their infantry with this SMG against German troops in WW2 and the Chinese against U.N. troops in Korea.

This glorious full size, non-firing display gun in wood and metal with removable 71rd. drum, has an action that allows you to cock the bolt and pull the trigger. We also offer an Original Ppsh41 sling and Drum Pouch with this package, as long as supplies last. (colors of pouch & sling may vary).

ATTENTION – EASTON SHOWROOM CUSTOMERS
Re: In Stock Inventory – If you are planning on visiting the showroom, feel free to call ahead to make sure that we stock the item(s) that you need. Please give us a least a few days' notice before your visit in case we need to retrieve goods in from our other warehouses. Note that the prices in Shotgun News are dealer prices and may not be the same prices as in our showroom.

ABOUT HIGH CAPACITY MAGAZINES:

Although we try to stay abreast of current State gun laws, it is a herculean task with over 20,000 laws on the books. By ordering, you are stating that you are complying with your Local & State laws. Most States allow large capacity magazines. Some do not. If you are unsure on this issue, contact your Local or State law enforcement to confirm what is allowed. This is a partial list of States with some hi-capacity restrictions: NJ, NY, MA, MD, HI, KS, CO, CT, IL and various county laws therein including Chicago, D.C.

DISCLAIMER

Parts sold by Sarco should be installed only by a competent gunsmith. These products are sold as is and without a warranty. No liability is expressed or implied for damage or injury which may result from the improper installation or use of these products.

OUR GUARANTEE - Our guarantee is simple and easy to understand. If you are not satisfied with any item received from us you have 5 days to return it for a replacement or a refund of the advertised price. All returns must be accompanied by a letter WITH YOUR INVOICE NUMBER and explanation of the problem. All returns must be in the same condition as you received them-any alterations or work will void the guarantee. Special order items not returnable. We can not accept returns on TOOLS unless the tool is defective. We do not refund any shipping costs unless the error/problem causing the return is our fault. Returns may be subject to 10% restocking charge. Send all shipments pre-paid. CODs will be refused. Any items returned due to customer's error are subject to a 10% restocking charge. ($2.00 minimum). As we do not install the parts we sell, we cannot guarantee they will function when installed by others. For proper function and safety, many gun parts should be installed by a competent gunsmith - see our disclaimer:

Our ads in the Shotgun News are catalogue prices and may not reflect any sales or higher pricing found on our website.

Prices are subject to change without notice. We are not responsible for typographical errors or misprints

REGARDING LOCAL, CITY & STATE REGULATIONS!

SARCO makes a large effort to keep abreast of state & local gun laws. With over 20,000 laws on the books this is a Herculean and impossible job. Some of the products sold by SARCO could be restricted for sale in your local area, while not restricted nationally. This could include, but not be limited to firearms, ammo, parts, high cap mags, edged weapons, air guns, etc. You must determine your right to purchase, own, use or resell specific products offered by SARCO in your jurisdiction. As local laws are constantly changing, it your responsibility to determine if a product is prohibited before ordering from SARCO. You warrant by ordering from SARCO that you are a legal adult without any legal restrictions from ordering and are complying with all state, local, and federal laws. Please check your local laws before ordering.

SPANISH CETME MODEL (C) RIFLE PARTS SET

Collaboration between German engineers and Franco's Spanish designers drove Spain to adopt the (C) version of the CETME rifle in 1974. Regarded as the lightweight option, the C rifle was adopted by the Spanish Army, Navy, and Air Force and chambered for the .308 Nato round. The German G-3 and the CETME are close cousins and share many of the same parts. In fact, 25 parts from the CETME and G-3 / HK91, are interchangeable with one another. Another 3 parts from the Trigger pack are also interchangeable as long as they are used as a set. The quality of the parts in this kit are remarkably excellent and outer parts are present with most of their original Parkerizing!

Our parts set includes all parts shown in the pictured parts breakdown above including the trunion and other necessary receiver parts for your semi auto build. We have barrels, slings, and 5 round magazines available separately and you can find plenty of low cost 20 rd mags on the market. Additionally we will have receivers available very soon. The kit's real visual strength is the wooden stock and forend which accentuate the rifle's appearance and makes it look sporty and more appealing than the plastic furniture of the G-3. These kits are outstanding and we have not had this kind of quality in bulk kits since we had our Argentine FAL kits! STANDARD

NAPOLEONIC FLAG

1st Grenadier Guard Flag as flown over the battlefield at Waterloo, 200 years ago. This flag represented the personal guard of Napoleon, made up of the 'Old guard' or most experienced and most dependable of the Imperial forces. Just about impossible to find this flag anywhere on the market, it is truly one of the most beautiful regimental battle flags that took to the field. We have carefully manufactured this flag in cotton with double batting and gold fringe around the outside with dimensions of @3 feet by 3 feet. One side of the flag shows the unit designation and the other lists 15 battle honors up until Waterloo. A strikingly glamorous flag for display or household decor..... $34.95 FLAG03

U.S. Veterans are key defenders of the Second Amendment!

Frau Elsa has measured your Luger needs and has der solution

ORIGINAL NEW FACTORY LUGER PARTS...ARE HERE!

Very limited supply of original Luger parts have arrived. Most people don't know that the Luger was first manufactured for the Swiss in 1900 and that Swiss Lugers were built like a fine watch and regarded as the most desirable of all Lugers.... but parts have been exceptionally difficult to come by. We have been most fortunate to obtain a 'cache' of original 'new' parts in Switzerland. Parts are quite limited so the sooner you act the better! It's virtually impossible to find these parts for sale anywhere! Talk about the "good ole' days", I never would have guessed we would find a deal like this again! We are listing some of the original new Luger parts here, but go to our website to check out the full listing of 1900, 1906, 1908 & model 29 parts. Some of these parts are in very short supply. These original factory parts are virtually priced at about what other's sell repro parts for.

U.S. WWII PARATROOPER SIGNAL CRICKET

Used in the days before and after D-Day, this device put out a distinctive clicking sound so that allied troops could communicate to "friendlies" by sound instead of with a bullet in the dark! Probably saved a lot of lives. Very few originals remain, except in museums. These work well and are made of brass with a metal flapper. U.S. embossed. $7.50 MISC284

A NEW WORLD OF 1911 .45 AUTO MAGS

SARCO HAS GONE TO EXTENSIVE LENGTHS TO DEVELOP A SUPERIOR 1911 .45 MAGAZINE

We have sold probably 150,000 of our price busters, but we decided we need a new & better 1911 mag & we are very pleased with our new program. We have tested our 1st production run and are ready to roll.

This is the results of over a year of product development.

Please check the quality features of our new magazine:

Produced on a computer controlled high speed link press. This provides a stable platform for progressive dies & uniformity. Body tooling has 6 stages & follower tooling has 16 stages. This assures an accurate & repeatable process with less metal stress, when fewer, less radical bends are made.

Latest technology parallel feed lip design for proper timed release of cartridge. Special for semi wad cutters, although per technical feed back semi wad cutters may require additional timing.

Welding is done on a Yasakawa computer controlled robotic arm argon welder. Unlike some .45 mags you can't see the seam weld on the back.

In house quality control gages to national standard are used for checking every stage of the production.

QC inspection involves a 2/5D video measuring machine enabling checking of every specification & keeps the record in memory.

Springs are tested to 20,000 cycles

Dimple designed as a mag catch override for easier mag insertion.

Latest rounded follower design

Mags are processed in a hot bath of sodium hydroxide, nitrates, & nitrites at 141° centi grade - This converts the surface to "magnetite"

All process done under specification of MIL-DTL-13924 & ASTM-D769 & ISO-11408

The tube is carburized (case hardened) by nitriding (heat treated in a nitrogen atmosphere). This retains a tough core (ductility, flexibility, springiness & resistance to stress fractures) while producing a 46-48 HRC surface hardness, creating scuff resistance, fatigue & corrosion resistance. Most important, it eliminates any chance for deformation of the front of the mag from cartridge inertia.

For use in all Gov't & Commerical 1911 pistols 1911, 1911A1 - Gov't Series 70, Series 80, commander, Essex, Rock Island, etc. - Also the many, many, many aftermarket 1911's.

Plus with all of the above a killer price - Only $8.95, 10 for $74.95 C45298

This is half the price of most reasonable .45 mags!

HISTORICAL HOLSTERS

U.S. 1912 CAVALRY HOLSTERS

The 1912 Cavalry holster is a favorite because it hangs lower from the belt than a 1916 Hip holster. It puts the pistol more in line with your hand and when mounted or in a vehicle follows the taper of your leg. We have both RIGHT and LEFT hand holsters in stock in several varieties:

1. STANDARD 1912 CAVALRY HOLSTER - Brown Buffalo leather holster with brass hardware and 18" leg strap. RIGHT HAND ONLY. Ruggedly made for hard use!..... $22.95 HOL040
2. PREMIUM RUSSET BROWN 1912 CAVALRY HOLSTER Made by another Saddlery known for making precision WWII Russet color holsters. The finish and embossing are excellent. LEFT HAND ONLY..... $35.00 HOL070

U.S. MODEL 1911 SHOULDER HOLSTERS

U.S. embossed rugged M7 shoulder holsters used by the military for 70 years+. Fits the Model 1911 and similar sized frames. A tanker's favorite way to carry the pistol! 4 types to choose from:

- A. M7 BROWN SHOULDER HOLSTER - RIGHT HAND DRAW..... $29.95 HOL067
- B. M7 BLACK SHOULDER HOLSTER RIGHT HAND DRAW..... $29.95 HOL052
- C. M7 RUSSET BROWN WW2 COLOR PREMIUM GRADE HOLSTER, RIGHT HAND DRAW..... $35.00 HOL028
- D. M7 RUSSET BROWN WW2 COLOR PREMIUM GRADE HOLSTER, LEFT HAND DRAW..... $35.00 HOL082

MODEL 1911 .45 HIP HOLSTERS

Standard tough Buffalo leather hip holster with U.S. embossed flap, leg strap and belt hooks. These are right hand draw holsters unless otherwise marked:

- BROWN 1911 HOLSTER - rugged 1916 leather holster as used in WWI & II. This has been a customer favorite because of price & quality..... $17.50 ea.

Comes with additional leg strap and strap for cinching the holster closed when attachments are not used. Belt loop on back. Has suppressor pouch for original slim suppressors. Handles similar sized frames too like the Walther P99. U.S. embossed rugged leather perfect for the field. $26.95 HOL095

GERMAN POCKET PISTOL "STASI" HOLSTER

East Germany reused everything they could from war time stockpiles. However, holsters were an item that they did have manufactured and they were known for making light and nimble close fitting Secret Police holsters. We have a small lot of holsters that were for PPK, HSC, and Mauser 1910 pocket pistols. Light, form fitting, and comfortable to wear..... $19.95 HOL079

WEBLEY .455 PISTOL HOLSTER

Fine leather holster for the MKVI Webley revolver as used in WWI & WWII. Brown color with brass hardware..... $29.95 HOL042

U.S. PREMIUM GRADE HOLSTERS

Sarco offers a long line of standard grade quality holsters which can be found in this ad on the 'Y' page. We also offer some exceptionally tanned U.S. Military historic holsters for presentation grade pistols. The finish and crisp embossing are superior to our standard line and are still affordably priced. Beautiful quality holsters for your top grade pistols!

YOU CAN HAVE IT ALL!

SHEPHERD SCOPES—THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY RANGE-FINDING, BULLET DROP COMPENSATING SCOPE WITH PATENTED DUAL RETICLES!

Zero in with one shot at 100 yards & you now have the range & bullet drop capabilities out to 1000 yards on any power with no further adjustment.
"Quality, precision & ease of use you could only dream about"

THE ONLY SCOPE IN THE WORLD TO GUARANTEE ITS ADJUSTMENTS AND TRACKING TO BE 100% ACCURATE - 100% OF THE TIME!!!

The unique Dual Reticle System, having the cross hair in the rear focal plane and the range finding circles in the front focal plane allows you one-shot zeroing. It's what sets the Shepherd apart from Zeiss, Nikon, Swarovski and other high quality scopes. It permits one-shot Zeroing, dead-on holding to extreme range with any high velocity load, windage and elevation adjustments that you know are accurate because you can visually verify them as they take place. An aiming point that stays on dead zero throughout the complete magnification range, parallax-elimination, and a quick and easy way to adapt for wind without losing the basic zero. Sounds like a lot of goodies wrapped up in one scope. All built into the Shepherd and one way or another they all derive from the patented Dual Reticle System.

3-10X40 $799.00 6-18X40 $899.00 (prices subject to change without notice)

Don't look for discounts, this is already the best bargain on the market. Your savings will come in ammo & a full freezer. We can match your rifle & load. We have 24" circles for our big game hunters. 18" circles for our all around hunters & 9" circles for our varminters. Join our Shepherd friends, grab your Shepherd scopes mounted on your rifles & be AMAZED at your shooting skills.

"With about two minutes of instructions my trainees were making consistent hits from 100 to 800 yards with the Shepherd P2 scope. Later that night under a quarter moon they outshot the Starlight Scope at the 300 meter range. They were amazed. I wasn't...I own a few Shepherds and I know what they can do..."

— MSG DELMONT USAR (RET)
MARKSMANSHIP INSTRUCTOR

SHEPHERD'S EASY ONE SHOT ZERO!

WHAT ABOUT ACCURACY???

"As for accuracy, the scope's 600 yard range finding circle produced a three shot 3.75 inch group two inches above dead center at 600 yards. The 1,000 yard circle at 1,000 yards put all shots in the black with an average elevation error of 3.33 inches. I did much more experimental shooting at various ranges (nearly 450 rounds), and my personal BOTTOM LINE IS that this ®Shepherd P1 Scope is staying right where it is, on top of my Remington 700-P rifle!"

NOTE FROM DAN SHEPHERD:
Our new 6x18x40 VARMINT/TARGET SCOPE WON TWO NATIONAL NRA TARGET MATCHES IN 2001.

"Darned if I didn't bowl prairie dogs over at 250 yards, and some of these barely quivered after being hit. One things for certain, I never missed by much - even at 250 yards with that rimfire. Without the Shepherd Scope, however, I don't think I'd ever have been able to come so close," Nick Sisley, in Magnum Guns & Shooting 1986.

ROCKOLA M14Special.....* $2,195Regular price....*$2,395

The Rockola M14F is built to the exact standards of the USGI original. The receiver is machined from an 8620 forging. This rifle is completed by using USGI original parts, a new U.S. made barrel and an excellent refinished wood stock. Our rifle is as close to the original USGI version available on the market today. A carbine configuration is also available with an 19.25" barrel.

EXPERIENCE HISTORY

M1 GARANDSpecial.....* $1,395Regular price....*$1,495

The M1, commonly called a Garand after it's designer John Garand, has been carefully restored to "arsenal re-issue". As the first semi-auto weapon issued to regular troops in the field it gave the U.S. a distinct advantage. The original GI receiver and all metal parts have been bead blasted and reparkerized in the original finish. The barrel is a new production Criterion. The M1 is a semiautomatic gas-operated rifle which is fed by an eight round "enbloc" clip.

1903A4 SNIPERSpecial.....* $1,295Regular price....*$1,495

Our 1903A4 sniper rifle is meticulously rebuilt using original 1903A3 receivers. The rifle, used well into the Vietnam war, is a late production model with 7/8 rings and new high quality 2.5 power Hi-Lux M82 scope. It's available with a Criterion 4 groove barrel. Production is limited.

SURPLUS BY THE TON!

Old Western Scrounger has made a huge purchase of surplus gun parts, ammo and clothing and are packed to the rafters with great stuff, cheap! We have listed as much as we can in this ad, but to see everything we carry, along with pricing, please go to our website www.ows-ammo.com and sign up for our e-newsletter for even better deals and the first crack at them! If you are a dealer who wishes to come and hand-pick goods, please call us at 304-274-0004 or email us at info@ows-ammo.com to set up a time.

M1 CARBINE STOCKS BY THE THOUSANDS! ALL MAKERS, AS LOW AS $19.95 EACH!

OWS has made a purchase of an entire tractor trailer load of the last known large shipment of original M1 Carbine stocks, all complete with original metal and topwood. We have virtually all makers: Inland (I.O. and H.I.), Winchester, IBM, Rock-Ola, NPM, Saginaw, Quality Hardware, Underwood, as well as low-cost original M2 stocks and later makers. We made a great buy on these and are offering them at far lower prices than normally seen, so if you've ever wanted to get that upgrade, replacement stock or put the correct stock on your M1 Carbine, get yours now.

All stocks come with an original striker plate, buttplate and front band spring, as well as original topwood (topwood does not match the stock maker.) Grade "A" = No cracks larger than hairline 1/8", good original finish, minor dings and scratches, no gouges or mars. Grade "B" = No cracks larger than hairline 1/2", good original finish, minor-medium dings and scratches, no gouges or mars. (All stocks are refundable, less shipping cost, which under no circumstance will be refunded).

Antiques S5270

SARCO, INC -MIG 21 jet fighter cockpit section from the DDR (East German) Air Force. We have only one single-seater. ATF will not allow the import of military aircraft so this is the end. Ours was saved from the smelter at the last possible minute. The single-seater will be missing the stick and maybe some instruments. The cockpit was cut out of existing planes that were phased out of service. Single cockpit MIG - $9000.00 MMP011.
 Please call us at (610) 250-3960 to order this item. These are oversized items. Cockpit shipped via truck at our 55% discount. See pictures of the actual unit and read more by visiting our website www.e-sarcoinc.com.

THE BADGE, THE BALLS AND THE BULL SH-T

is an action packed fiction eBook with lots of realism, excitement with lots of gun information in shootouts, tactical innovation including unheard of police techniques. Murderers die by the bullets, cartel bad-guys die hard, while the radical jihadists meet their virgins. Not so smart police administrators get out-foxed as do the Feds by the hard charging cops and retired cops, the main characters in this eBook. You will be cheering them on as they take on crime and evil and wish that they were policing your town or city. It is accompanied with some good laughs and of course, stress relief. The eBook is available at Amazon and other book outlets.

Fred’s Military M14 Rifle Stocks

FREE! w/every order CMP info 25meter sight-in target genuine shooting/GI surplus item & valuable pro-gun info!

As I’m prepping for retirement, the good news is our new website; you might want to take a look at it! Even better news: Orders are charged the day they ship; you get an email w/UPS#; more images uploaded; we now accept Discover and Amex as well as Visa/MC - in other words, a considerable upgrade. But better hurry, as we’re down to 25,000 stocks! Whew! I’ll be happy (and sad) to see that last stock go out the door!

M14 Stocks Fred’s - The Nations Largest Dealer

- ‘Presentation’ - the best you find, HARD to find. “P” doesn’t stand for “perfect”, but as near perfect as you get! ‘As New’ metal. Walnut/Birch w/DoD & P - Big Red is unmarked.
Please check website for price and availability.
- ‘As New’ - as above but with usual small storage dings. Metal ‘as new’. Being almost 50 years old, they’re getting a little hard to find. Each has DoD/P except BR.
Please check website for price and availability.
- ExcellentPlus - GI M14 stocks close to ‘as new’, or - at least! - at the top of the excellent grade. Buttplates usually excellent or better. Call ‘em, the best of the ‘excellents’! DoD & P.
Please check website for price and availability.
- Excellent - Used, not much, w/VG-EXC buttplates. Fits any milspec M14-type semiauto, as all our stocks do, even Chinese M14 rifles.
Please check website for price and availability.
- ‘Selectplus’ - Good used stocks near, but not quite, ‘excellent’. A few dings too many to be ‘excellent’, but certainly nice stocks - easy to ‘clean up’! W/metal, “DoD” & “P” (except Big Reds).
Please check website for price and availability.

- Military-refinished M14 Stocks Each refinished by Uncle Sam to military standards- smooth-sanded, repaired as needed, completely ready for re-issue. Buttplates painted or left ‘as-is’ Please check website for price.
- ARE YOU AN AMERICAN?
Our goal next year: *2000+ Appleseeds, *50,000+ Appleseeders. Can’t do it with you there, laying on the couch, fighting for liberty and your way of life (you have to get off the couch!)
- 2014: *2000 Appleseeds, *100,000+ Appleseeders. Can’t do it with you there, on the couch, fighting for liberty and your way of life (won’t work - you gotta get off that couch...)
- Our goal in SIX, FIVE, FOUR THREE years [2016]: *40,000 Appleseeds [someone has said, “we’ll have to build more rifle ranges” and we’ll be doing that, thru the Designated Appleseed Range program], 1,000,000+ Appleseeders. Can we do it with you there, on the couch, fighting for liberty and your way of life? (won’t work...you gotta get off)
- The only way this will happen will be for you to get off that couch, and help!
- Can we save a nation? Before you scoff, reach down inside you and poke that sleeping American there, and ask him.
- He’ll tell you, straight out: We Americans can do anything we put our minds to.
- Sign up to be at an Appleseed! Save money, by learning to hit the target - with every shot!*

- ❑ 25m Army Qualification Test [AQT] Targets - In the battle for freedom, be on the front line and in the history books, able to shoot a rifle - not in the rear, cooking! If things ever start poppin’, there may be room up front only for those who can shoot. And, recent 60’s counterculture to the contrary, up front is where you wanna be, defending your freedoms, punching the message home to those who’d take it away. The AQT, the Army Precision Combat Rifle Course, measures your current ability to shoot any rifle (even .22). Don’t be in doubt any longer: you need to know how well you can shoot now. Then use the Guide to improve your shooting to Rifleman standards. 10 sets (four 12” X 16” sheets per set) with Fred’s no-fail “Guide to Becoming a Rifleman”! One set for $16 (+ UPS). Quantity discounts: 2 sets for $30, 5 sets for $60. Every set comes with its own Guide - order 5 sets, get 5 Guides. Pool with friends, save money, everyone gets a Guide!
- ❑ 100-yd AQT target pacs! 100 AQT silhouettes for 25m or 100-yd shooting. Shoot the Advanced AQT: staple 4 targets at 100 & fire the normal 25m course. It’s tough - but fun! Or practice your standing at 25m & your prone slow-fire at 100 yds. 100 targets, one AQT silhouette per 8 X 11 target sheet. 25 complete Advanced AQT sets! Or just good practice targets! $10/100
- ❑ The ‘Quick’n Dirty’ AQT - One-sheet w/all four AQT stages. The one we shoot at Appleseed. Quick, ‘cause you staple up only one sheet, not four; dirty, ‘cause you get fast results. Great for practice, getting to that magic 1-inch, 4 moa group that defines RIFLEMAN. Great to sucker newbies into shooting! Perfect for club matches. 50 sheets = 50 complete AQTs for $12! Heck, 50 tries, even a monkey can make it!
- ❑ HITS COUNT (REDCOAT) TARGETS: The targets taking America by storm! Where else can you find a target that measures HOW FAR OFF YOU ARE EFFECTIVE WITH YOUR RIFLE - and requires only 25m (27 yards) to do it? And requires only 13 rounds and 60 sec.? Bundled 100 approx for $15
- ❑ THE BEST CHOICE? The AQT/QD Target Combo! 60 times at bat, plenty of targets - perfection! Where can you buy perfection, and save a coupla bucks doing it? $26 2/$50
- ❑ “Rifleman” T-Shirt - Rifleman, here’s your shirt! Front: ‘Rifleman’ definition Rear: “Shooting - the only sport endorsed by the Founding Fathers - an American Tradition”. Ash Gray M, L, XL $10 ea Sweatshirts L, XL only: $15
- ❑ Rifleman package! Only at Fred’s! New milspec USMC-style cloth shooting jackets, w/elbow/shoulder/upper sling arm pads. Wear in the field, too. As a package with the AQT targets & Guide, only to riflemen - to help would-be riflemen get started: [S, M Chest 39-42, L 43-45, left or right] $80 [jacket, targets, and Guide!] Size Suggestion: Order a size up so you have room for sweatshirts/sweater underneath in cooler weather! Special deal! Add $7 for a “Rifleman” T-shirt!
- ❑ M1 Op Rod Springs - New. Get one, “just in case.” $5
- ❑ M14 Unissued M 60 MAG Bandoleers - Original cotton 100-rd M60 pouch, w/carry strap, holds 5 M14 mags, 3 fit in GI 50-cal can, 2 in .30 can. $3 4/$10 10/$25 100/$75

- ❑ Squad Automatic Weapon Unissued MAG Pouch - has carry-strap and tie-down; ideal to quickly store your empty mags or brass at the range. No fumbling, no bumping, just toss in the cotton pouch/bag. SAW pouches are handy things to have around! $5 ea 3/$11
- ❑ M14 Ammo Repacks - 6-pckt bando [most w/safety pin], 12 5-rd clips, 6 cardbds, HTF mag filler - all unissued US GI, and getting scarce. Each 60-rd bandoleer equals three standard M14 mags $8 ea 10/$75
- ❑ US M1 Carbine Repack Kits - 12 10-rd clips, cardboards, bandoleer. $12 10/$75 Carbine Stripper Clips 10/$10 M1 Carbine bandoleers - hold 120 rds $4 3/$10

- Super RARE Navy Garand Ammo Repacks with unusual half-inch shorter cardboards specifically for .308. Stamped “8-rd”, unissued. M1 lovers, get one for your collection. A rare collectible, for a buck more? It’s nuts! $11
- US GI Garand Clips unissued - 2 ea 20/$30.00
- ❑ M14 Slotted Handguards w/clip: HTF in good shape!
- ❑ “presentation” $50 ❑ “as new” $20 ❑ “Exc.” $12
- ❑ “Gd- VG” $8 2/$14 ❑ fair - ugly, but work $5 8/$12
- ❑ Solid Handguards w/clip: The later solid HG was very durable in service. ❑ “presentation” $20 ❑ as-new $12 ❑ Exc/as-new $6 2/$10 ❑ VG $4 2/$6 ❑ fair - yes, they will work fine, but be ugly $2 12/$12
- ❑ M14 Buttstock Cleaning Kits - Clean your rifle - more important, make field repairs - and add 2/3 lb to dampen recoil in rapid fire. Common problems - loose rear sight, stuck gas piston, dirty chamber - all are easy to handle with this kit handy in the buttstock, where you’ll never ‘forget to bring it’! Complete 4-pc steel rod, tip, pouch, bore brush, chamber brush, combo tool handle, oiler.
- ❑ ‘As New’ grade - complete, as above $25 ❑ Excellent $18
- ❑ VG $12 ❑ Average $10
- ❑ US GI M14 Op Rod Springs - US GI, fresh from original US gov’t boxes, a new supply just in! $6
- ❑ M14 Black Handguards w/clips: (scarce) HTF in the better grades. ❑ ‘P’ $50 ❑ Exc-‘as new’ $25 ❑ vg-exc $12 ❑ good $8 2/$12 ❑ fair $5 6/$15
- ❑ M14 Buttplates - GI hinged buttplate w/screws, rear swivel. ‘Exc-As New’ $25 VG/Exc $15 Used $9 6/$50 ❑ Buttplate only, no mounting screws or swivel. Used $5 6/$25 Exc $10 6/$50
- ❑ Metal Starter Tabs for .30 MG Belts - GI, unissued Hard to find. Nice piece of history. $ 3 10/$15 100/$30

“GO AHEAD—HATE YOUR COUNTRY”

It’s pretty much the “cool” “in-thing”, these days.

If you don’t hate your country – or at least despise it – then it’s likely your kids do. Or your spouse does. Or your relatives (at least some of them) do. As do many of your friends, your neighbors, and your co-workers.

It’s hard not to hate/despise at least a little bit, as we all swim, mostly unknowingly, in a sea of political correctness – unconsciously influenced, a little or a lot, by the “mainstream” thinking in this country.

Yep. Pickled in political correctness. All of us. Each of us.

And PC says this country stinks. Ask your kids; I’m confident they’ll agree. We’re energy hogs, messing up the planet, destroying rain forests, greedy takers, etc, etc.

PC has damned this country. Not only in fact, but in concept.

Even if no country is perfect. No one even argues that point. Heck, just look at the UN, the biggest collection of thug governments on the planet. (But which PC thoroughly approves, even idolizes. Go figure.)

A country’s ideals and goals can be perfect, however far it falls short of attaining those goals.

And a country’s performance should be given great weight – and here our country is second to none.

Our millions mired in poverty live in a style which would equate to royalty in third world countries – air, color TV, DVRs, multiple autos, etc.

And our millions of illiterates? Guess that’s their choice. Certainly us taxpayers laid out beaucoup money to teach them...

So, tread lightly when it comes to criticizing this country.

It’s the only one you’ve got.

And while you’re at it, think about it. It’s kinda important.

America is still the land of the free (how much longer is the big concern...).

And to the extent there are problems in America today, they can be largely summed up by the old “we have met the enemy – and he is us” saying. We are where we are, today, because of who we are.

We are ignorant of our country’s history, ignorant of the foundation and the principles upon which our country were founded.

We are lazy. We don’t have the energy to find out about what we should have the energy to find out about.

We don’t care. Which is why we are ignorant.

Maybe it’s the “don’t care” which would be most highly insulting to the founders up in heaven. They fought, froze, bled, died, starved, suffered – all for something no one cares about, today.

That’s hard.

But there is a good flip side to that.

If WE are the problem, WE can fix it. Anytime. Even right now.

We can get off the couch. We can come to Project Appleseed, where we’ll learn to shoot a rifle - and where we’ll learn what America is all about.

If you don’t want to come, fine [even as I shake my head, sorrowfully]. But at least do it for your kids. Bring them to Appleseed.

So that, it’s possible, one day they may come to understand that America is not a country to hate, but a country to admire.

You’d be doing them a favor, and your country a favor. And maybe even yourself a favor.

This country is only as worthy as each of us is. Maybe it is time for YOU to increase your worth. Maybe it’s time for you to come to an Appleseed. Surprise yourself, and do something you never thought you’d have time to do...

A CHARGING HANDLE FOR THE 21ST CENTURY GUNFIGHTER!

BCMGUNFIGHTER CHARGING HANDLE

BCMGUNFIGHTER™ Charging Handles features internal redesigns to direct the force off of the weakest part of the system, the roll pin, and into the body of the charging handle during support hand only manipulations. This new design has a built in “backstop” engineered into the charging handle. As the latch is opened, its’ travel is limited by these flat surface backstops. With this travel limiting feature, the shooter has a stronger system and a smoother operation.

ANTIQUE BLACK POWDER PERCUSSION MUSKETS

These old smoke poles were re-discovered buried in an older section of our warehouse. These range from 150 to 200 years old, antiques that were accumulated during our early years, many of which came from the Bannerman Building on Broadway in New York City, just before they razed the building to make a parking lot. Percussion muskets such as these were relied upon heavily along the ever expanding frontier. All have been handsmithed, many converted from flintlock to percussion. Bore sizes vary, mostly large caliber. Condition antique, 150 to 200 years old. Each one has a lock, all appear complete with heavy patina on iron. At this price we will close them all out and allow you to clean, oil, repair using that midnight oil.

"Congress shall never disarm any Citizen unless such as are or have been in Actual Rebellion." New Hampshire's request for a Bill of Rights, June 21, 1788.

"ON every question of construction (of the Constitution, let us) carry ourselves back to the time when the Constitution was adopted, recollect the spirit manifested in the debates, and instead of trying what meaning may be squeezed out of the text, or invented against it, conform to the probable one which it was passed." SHOTGUN NEWS

The trading post for anything that shoots.

More than just ads!

Every issue has a unique blend of fascinating feature stories and information-packed columns. Here's where you'll read about the guns you see advertised in SHOTGUN NEWS!

Senior Editor Peter Kokalis brings his tart, scrupulous brand of commentary to the world of tactical arms in the first issue every month, with longer pieces in the perfect-bound issues that run six times a year.

The first issue of the month adds Clayton E. Cramer's scholarly take on gun politics and a historical look at ammunition from Paul Scarlata.

David Fortier looks at some of the newest developments in ammunition, firearms and optics in the second issue, along with Reid Coffield's folksy insights on gunsmithing. Frank James offers his hand-gunning expertise, while Vin Suprynowicz applies his blowtorch wit and insight to the struggle for the right to bear arms. The SHOTGUN NEWS New Products column gives you a look at the newest arms, ammo and accessories—well before the monthly firearms magazines get to them.

A jackpot package of features comes your way in the third issue of the month, along with Tom Gaylord's "Airgun" column.

Every issue of SHOTGUN NEWS features political commentary from Chris and Jeff Knox.

"ON every question of construction (of the Constitution, let us) carry ourselves back to the time when the Constitution was adopted, recollect the spirit manifested in the debates, and instead of trying what meaning may be squeezed out of the text, or invented against it, conform to the probable one which it was passed." Thomas Jefferson, letter to William Johnson, June 12, 1823, John P. Foley, ed., The Jefferson Cyclopedia (New York: Funk & Wagnalls, 1900), 844.

"That the people have a right to bear arms for the defence of themselves and their own state, or the United States, or for the purpose of killing game; and no law shall be passed for disarming the people or any of them, unless for crimes committed, or real danger of public injury from individuals...." "The Address and Reasons of Dissent of the Minority of the Convention" in the Pennsylvania Packet and Daily Advertiser, December 18, 1787.

Original Intent
What the Founders Really Said About Guns
Original Intent
What the Founders Really Said About Guns
By Clayton E. Cramer
Clayton E. Cramer, author and monthly contributor to SHOTGUN NEWS, collected, verified, and added new historical quotes that reveal the Framers of our Constitution intent of the Second Amendment. Again and again SHOTGUN NEWS has been asked for copies of the historical quotes that were used for many years as fillers in the classified section. It became clear that readers were using these as a source for writing letters to the editor, to their congressional representatives, etc.

It's Only A Matter of Time!

It's time to BE READY!

All you have to do is read the headlines to know why people all over the country are thinking more about preparedness. Whether it's catastrophic weather, utility breakdowns, terrorist attack or the collapse of civil order, millions of Americans aren't willing just to hope for the best. They are taking more active measures to get ready for the times when stopping at the grocery or the ATM won't be options. BE READY! addresses the skills and supplies they will need to survive.
